Publishers' Note

This, the official History of the 88th Division, is published by authority of the Commanding General of the Division, who, under date of June 3, 1918, made the following announcement:

HEADQUARTERS
88TH DIVISION
U. S. A.

The WYNKOOP, HALLENBECK, CRAWFORD COMPANY has been authorized to publish the official History of the 88th Division, which will contain in picture and in text the achievements of the Division—its training, its service overseas, its return home and demobilization. A complete roster of all officers and men who served in the Division overseas will form a part of the History.

All members of the Division are assured that this History will, in every way, be a worthy volume, and all are urged to secure a copy of what will be the record of one of the most interesting chapters in their life's history.

WILLIAM WEIGEL,
Major-General, U. S. A.

The publishers undertook this work in view of the interest and enthusiasm evinced by the officers and men of the 88th Division, from the States of Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, the Dakotas and neighboring States; and upon the assurances of co-operation and support from them and that there was a tremendous demand for a book giving in pictures and text the accomplishments of the 88th Division.

It is a pleasure to acknowledge, with appreciation, the co-operation of all those who have made its issuance possible, especially

INTRODUCTION

THIS short story of the Eighty-Eighth Division's participation in the world war was prepared mainly to give the men of the Division a few facts which would enable them in future years to recall the many pleasant recollections which they will surely have of their service in the United States and France. No attempt has been made to give a detailed account of the many noble things accomplished by each organization or individual. The book is simply a story of what the Division as a whole accomplished; accompanied by photographs and maps.

The Division passed through three big stages in its career, therefore, the book is divided into four main parts: First part, organization and training at Camp Dodge, Iowa, and the trip to France; second part, arrival in France, training, and life in the trenches; third part, the period after the Armistice, which includes training, athletics, entertainment, the trip home and demobilization; fourth part, complete roster of all officers and men who served with the Division in France.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE 88TH DIVISION

September 4, 1917, to July 24, 1918

The 88th Division, a National Army Division, was organized September 4, 1917, at Camp Dodge, Iowa, from men drafted from the states of Minnesota, Iowa, the Dakotas and Illinois.

Later when these first drafts had been transferred in large measure to Camps Cody, Bowie, Doniphan, Pike, Travis and Gordon, newly drafted men from these original states, together with men from Missouri and Nebraska, constituted the bulk of the Division.

The Division was officered largely by reserve officers from the First Training Camp at Fort Snelling, Minnesota, and from the Second Training Camps at Forts Sheridan, Snelling and Benjamin Harrison.

July 25, 1918, to September 4, 1918

July 25, 1918, the Division began moving from Camp Dodge overseas, and was assembled in the 21st Training Area with headquarters at Semur, Cote d'Or, France, less the 163d Artillery Brigade, which was sent to the artillery training school at Clermont Ferrand in the south of France and never rejoined the Division.

September 5, 1918, to September 13, 1918

On September 5, 1918, Major-General William Weigel, who had just been promoted from Brigadier General in command of the 56th Infantry Brigade of the 28th Division, U. S. A., which had taken part in the Second Marne offensive, was assigned as Commander of the 88th Division. The Division was assigned to the VI American Corps, First Army, for training in open warfare.

September 14, 1918, to September 27, 1918

September 14, 1918, the Division moved by rail to the Hericourt, Haute-Saone Training Area near Belfort, France. Its position in support enabled the 29th American Division to be withdrawn from the Center Sector of Haute-Alsace and sent to take a prominent part in the Meuse-Argonne offensive, where, crossing the river Meuse at Samogueux, it advanced to the high ground east of Consenvoye and captured the enemy artillery observation points and massed artillery there. This maneuver enabled the American divisions west of the Meuse River to advance without having their right flank held up by artillery fire from these heights. Thus, by releasing the 29th Division from the Haute-Alsace Sector, the 88th Division contributed, not indirectly, to the winning of the important Meuse-Argonne offensive.

On leaving the 21st Training Area at Semur, Cote d'Or on September 14, 1918, the 88th Division was transferred to the VII American Army Corps (with headquarters at Remiremont) for administrative purposes.

September 23, 1918, to November 1, 1918

On September 23, 1918, advanced elements of the 88th Division moved into the Center Sector of Haute-Alsace, which was being temporarily held by the 38th French Division that had relieved the 29th American Division. These advanced elements, totaling eight officers and four hundred men, were augmented until on October 7, 1918, Division Headquarters of the 88th Division was moved to Montreaux Chateau, Haute-Alsace; and on October 15, 1918, the command of the Center Sector of Haute-Alsace passed from the 38th French Division to the 88th American Division, which formed part of the 40th French Army Corps of the VII French Army, while remaining under the VII American Army Corps for administrative purposes.

To reach the sector, the infantry and engineers of the Division had been forced to make long marches—sometimes 25 kilometers a day—on congested roads, pulling with them their heavily loaded machine gun carts, combat and field wagons, in cases the average weight pulled per man being 250 pounds.

Furthermore, the Division had been forced to go without essential supplies, because all available transportation was being used to the maximum in the Argonne drive. On arrival in France, the Division had been required to turn in all its field ranges, overcoats, and all except one blanket per man; and means of cooking had to be improvised, or secured by purchase from the French or by the utilization of small French stoves in billets, supplemented by the extensive use of camp kettles and watercans. Until October 6, 1918, there were only two ambulances in the Division—and they had to serve the French troops in the area also.

Meantime, on September 20, 1918, a wide-spread epidemic of influenza set in, and in eight days there were 1,370 cases in one regiment alone. This epidemic increased until October 14, 1918, on which date there were eighty deaths. All told there were 6,845 cases of influenza and 1,041 cases of pneumonia reported, from which 444 deaths resulted.

After arrival in sector, much additional marching was made necessary by reason of the withdrawal of French divisions and the re-arrangement of their forces on the north and south of the Center Sector of Haute-Alsace. On October 24, 1918, the Division took over the Fulleren subsector, of the South Sector of Haute-Alsace, making a total of approximately nineteen kilometers of front line held by the 88th Division.

While in this (Haute-Alsace) sector, energetic patrolling, often in force, in connection with the French division in the sector and later when the 88th American Division alone occupied the sector, kept the enemy constantly on the alert, held in the south many German planes, considerable artillery, and several divisions which had remained in this sector of the German line for a long time. All this force, consequently, was held out of the Meuse-Argonne offensive, and again the 88th Division contributed, less indirectly, to the success of that offensive. In this (Haute-Alsace) sector, several night raids were carried out by the 33th Division and a number of prisoners were captured, enabling the identification of the opposing divisions to be kept up-to-date. German "stormstruppen" troops, assigned to the duty of roving from one sector to another between the Voges and the Swiss Border, also made several raids on the lines of the 33th Division, both at night and in the daytime. These enemy raids were accompanied by gas projector attacks and by intense artillery bombardments, but at no time were the German raiding parties able to enter the lines held by the Division.

On November 2, 1918, the 33th Division began to withdraw from the Haute-Alsace sector, and on November 4, 1918, turned over command of the sector to the 154th French Division; 33th Division Headquarters being established temporarily on the outskirts of Belfort.

November 2, 1918, to November 11, 1918

Meanwhile, on November 1, 1918, the 33th American Division was transferred to the Second American Army (with headquarters at Toul), and on November 6, 1918, began moving the advance brigade to the Lagny Area, north of Toul, where it was placed in the IV Army Corps (American) Reserve, which corps had headquarters at Wienville, preparatory to taking active part in the Meuse-Argonne offensive. The balance of the Division was placed in Second American Army Reserve, with 33th Division Headquarters at Lagny.

Again, the presence of the 33th Division, this time on the Meuse-Argonne front, made possible during the days immediately preceding the armistice the delivery up to the very hour of the armistice of even more powerful blows by other elements of American divisions released by the arrival of the 33th Division in Corps Reserve. The plans of the Second Army for the contemplated attack east of the Mozelle River, effective November 14, 1918, and which was to strike the German line between METZ and SARREBRUCK, provided for the 33th Division an important part in what could have been a very important phase of the Metz coup. The signing of the armistice on November 11, 1918, stopped this new offensive—and effectively put an end to the fighting.

The achievements of the 33th Division have been measured only by its opportunities.

ORGANIZATION AND TRAINING

At Camp Dodge

F

OLLOWING the passage of the Selective Service Act and the registration June 5, 1917, of approximately 10,000,000 men, the problem of housing the new army had been solved only on paper. The plan adopted by the War Department called for sixteen National Army cantonments having a capacity of approximately 10,000 men each, and ground for drill, maneuvers and target ranges adequate for the training needs of such a number.

On the 18th of June, 1917, the War Department announced by General Order that an infantry (the 88th)

Division would be organized at Camp Dodge, near Des Moines, Iowa. The site selected for Camp Dodge was ten miles northwest of Des Moines, the state capital of Iowa. It had for many years been the camping ground of the Iowa National Guard. On June 29, 1917, when Major N. A. Butler, the constructing quartermaster, first rode over the cantonment site, there were no buildings except 12 company mess halls, which were used by the National Guard organizations during their annual encampments there. There was also the arsenal of the Iowa National Guard, a concrete building of considerable size, located on the railway; and a small brick house, which was utilized as a Headquarters Building for several months.

Limited as they were by the lack of adequate railroad facilities, the construction of Camp Dodge was no less remarkable than that of the other fifteen camps. A single track electric railway between Des Moines and Perry, Iowa, in no way adapted to the heavy freight traffic and almost totally lacking in passenger cars for more than civilian patronage, made the transportation of materials extremely difficult. By November 24th, all buildings authorized to that date for the camp were completed with the exception of the theatre and two officers' quarters at the Base Hospital. The 129 individual heating plants for officers' quarters and medical buildings, the sewer system with a total length of 131,052 feet, all water mains, having a total length of 170,355 feet, the pumping stations, wells and million gallon reservoir, the electric lighting system, the telephone system and road work were all completed. There were many changes and additions to the original plans, but these are incidental to the history of the division.

An important feature of the cantonment which contributed in a large way to the welfare of the men was a part of the camp, centrally located, and known as the Civic Center. Here a government-built and managed theatre seating 3,000 persons, a Y. W. C. A. Hostess House, a Y. M. C. A. Auditorium, a Lutheran Brotherhood

Panoramic View of Camp Dodge

Building, a Knights of Columbus Auditorium and a library erected by the American Library Association, provided facilities for education, recreation and amusement of all kinds.

The history of the 88th Division may be said to have commenced on the 25th of August, 1917, at which time, in compliance with a War Department order, Major General Edward H. Plummer arrived at Camp Dodge and assumed command. He was directed to organize a division according to the following table:

313TH ENGINEERS
313TH TRAIN HEADQUARTERS AND MILITARY POLICE
313TH AMMUNITION TRAIN
313TH SUPPLY TRAIN
313TH SANITARY TRAIN

In addition to the division organizations, the 163d Depot Brigade was established to which, later, all incoming drafted men were attached before being permanently assigned to the division. The Depot Brigade served also to take care of men physically unfit for combatant branches of the service, and to hold specialists, such as psychologists, chemists, etc., pending their assignment to special services. The camp, at this time, was only a row of partly completed wooden barracks, without water supply or lights.

Headquarters were established in an old brick house near the southern end of camp and the following assignments made for division staff:

Major Sam M. Parker, Division Adjutant
Major Cary I. Crockett, Division Inspector and Acting Chief of Staff
Lt. Col. Henry C. Bonnycastle, Division Quartermaster
Lt. Col. Jay R. Shook, Division Surgeon
Major Clarence G. Fronk, Division Sanitary Inspector
Major Clyde L. Eastman, Division Signal Officer
Major Wm. A. Graham, Division Judge Advocate
1st Lt. George N. Northrop, Division Statistical Officer
2d Lt. Michael M. Kinkad, Division Statistical Officer
2d Lt. Nazard M. Coursolle, Division Statistical Officer

In addition to these the following assignments were made among general and field officers who had reported:

Brig. Gen. Charles C. Ballou, 175th Infantry Brigade (never joined Brigade)
Brig. Gen. William D. Beach, 176th Infantry Brigade
Brig. Gen. Stephen M. Foote, 163d Field Artillery Brigade
Brig. Gen. Robert N. Getty, 163d Depot Brigade

Lt. Col. Robert P. Howell, 313th Engineers
Major R. B. Ellis, 351st Infantry
Major Horace N. Munro, 350th Infantry
Major Henry A. Meyer, 352d Infantry
Major Arthur J. Lynch, 319th Infantry
Major Peter J. Hennessey, 319th Infantry
Major William J. O'Loughlin, 337th Machine Gun Battalion
Major George R. Somerville, 338th Machine Gun Battalion
Major Thomas H. Cunningham, 339th Machine Gun Battalion

The First Reserve Officers Training Camp which closed at Fort Snelling, Minnesota, August 15, 1917, supplied the division with its first assignment of junior officers, who had all arrived at Camp Dodge by August 29th. A definite plan was adopted in assigning these officers to commands: the first and second companies from Fort Snelling were used to officer the 319th Infantry, the third and fourth companies the 350th Infantry, the fifth and sixth companies the 351st Infantry, the seventh and ninth companies the 352d Infantry and the eighth company the three machine gun battalions. Likewise, the officers from the three batteries were assigned to the 163d Field Artillery Brigade, the 313th Ammunition Train and the 313th Trench Mortar Battery. Thus officers who had been in the same company at the training camp were to a large extent kept together. This distribution made, 200 of the remaining officers were relieved and ordered to the 33d (National Guard) Division at Houston, Texas, September 2d, 1919, and fifty-two to the 42d (National "Rainbow" Guard) Division, at Mineola, Long Island, N. Y., September 1st.

The officers' enthusiasm over their new work was the predominating note, together with an insistent desire to get "over there" as soon as possible. The prospects for Germany were not at that time as bright as they had been earlier and as they became later, and much of the anxiety to sail for France was due to a fear that the war might end soon. This fear was a factor in causing many to decide to choose to go to other divisions.

By the 5th of September, 1917, the Division had been organized—almost complete in officers—but without enlisted personnel. On that date the first draft men began to arrive, from Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota and Central Illinois. Coming from their comfortable homes, most of them without any conception of military life, they did not know what to expect, and the first impressions were not reassuring nor comforting.

September 8, 1917, Lt. Col. Charles S. Lincoln, General Staff, reported at Camp Dodge and was assigned to duty as Chief of Staff. With the exception of the period the following winter when he went to France with General Plummer, he held this position until October, 1918, when he became a victim of Spanish Influenza during the Division's stay at Hericourt (Haute Saone), France. He recovered sufficiently after several weeks to go to the Riviera, where he regained his health. He did not return to the Division, but became Deputy G-1 at General Headquarters, Chaumont, and finally G-1 of the A. E. F. During Colonel Lincoln's absence in France, the winter of 1917-18, his duties were performed by Lt. Col. H. L. Cooper.

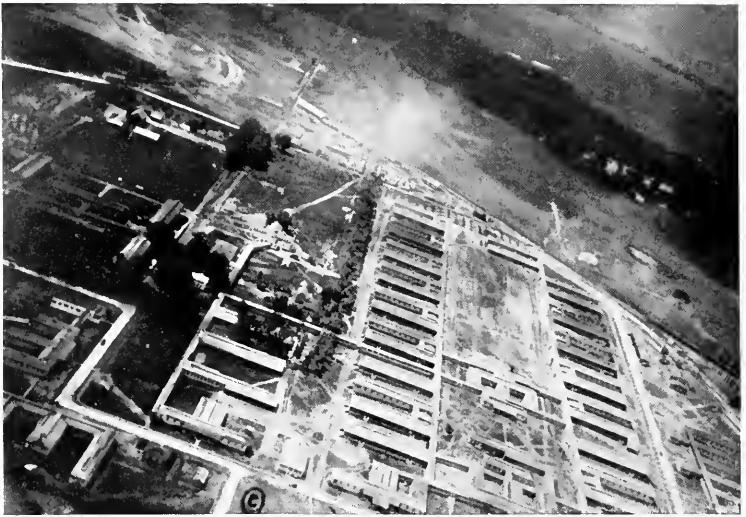

By September 9th, practically all the five per cent draft contingent had reported at Camp Dodge, but the quota amounted only to 2,350 men. About this time, there began to arrive in frequent detachments non-commissioned officers and privates from cavalry and infantry organizations of the Regular Army. These regular army soldiers proved an important adjunct to the training staff, but however competent the instructors might have been, too much cannot be said of the splendid spirit displayed by the men who came with the draft. It was a matter of constant remark how they took hold of their work and how suddenly they emerged from untrained citizenry into alert, intelligent, well-set-up soldiers.

Training was at first the same as for all American soldiers, with stress on physical drill. School of the soldier and school of the squad without arms became the daily routine, but it was never allowed to become a drudgery. The new men showed themselves apt and intelligent. In a remarkably short time, the men had been whipped into shape and these formed the foundation of a skeleton division of select non-commissioned officers and privates who could be ready, in turn, to train the men of the next draft.

On September 10th, 1917, Major L. A. Toombs was assigned as Assistant Division Adjutant and April 8, 1918, became Division Adjutant. He succeeded Major Edward S. Hayes, who was appointed November 13, 1917. Colonel Toombs remained with the Division until February, 1919, when he was sent to Rome as American Provost Marshal of Italy.

Camp Dodge was completed sufficiently to house troops as far as 7th Street when the first drafted men arrived. The camp was being built by a combine of contractors under Charles Weitz' Sons and their performance was unquestionably a feat of swift construction. The company buildings were erected according to plans and specifications made early in the war and were designed to hold 150-men companies. But in adapting the United States forces to be brigaded with French and British troops and to relieve corresponding units in trenches, certain changes were made, among them, the increase of company strength to 250. It therefore became necessary to use three buildings to house two companies.

In order to rush construction for the accommodation of other early arriving increments of drafted men, it had been necessary to impress every available man into the service of the builders, and it was a poor worker indeed who could not draw $7 to $10 per day at work in which he claimed to be proficient, but regarding which he knew almost nothing at the start. The contractors' report for the week ending September 15th shows that 5,759 men were employed. In spite of many poor workmen, construction proceeded swiftly and while heating apparatus was scarcely in by the first real cold weather, progress cannot be said to have been anything but marvelous and the work well done.

On September 19th, the second increment of the first draft began to arrive at camp. By the end of September, the division had 684 officers and 18,428 enlisted men regularly assigned and 259 officers and 228 enlisted men attached. The 1st Infantry, Iowa National Guard, which had been encamped adjoining the grounds and had performed good service guarding Government property, had departed.

Hardly had the latest recruit been put through the rudiments of military drill when there began a series of events which, in the succeeding months, threatened to take all the enthusiasm out of the officers and non-commissioned staff. On October 22d, in compliance with War Department orders, 3,000 men were transferred from the division to the 31th Division at Camp Cody, New Mexico. On the 25th, 1,000 more were transferred to the 33d Division at Camp Logan, Houston, Texas. November 16th to 19th, 8,000 were sent to Camp Pike, Arkansas. By December 10, 13,500 had been transferred from the Division. The loss of men was altogether disheartening to those who had come to look upon them as part of a permanent organization, but the rest of the division history at Camp Dodge is practically a repetition of this experience. New draftmen would arrive, be in camp for a few weeks and just as military progress was becoming marked, they were withdrawn and sent away to fill up other divisions destined for early departure for France.

The next increments were due February 15, 1918, but on account of railroad congestion, they were delayed. About 15,000 Iowa and Minnesota men arrived late in February, but in March came another heavy drain on personnel, 4,082 men being sent to Camp Doniphan on the 15th, later 2,800 to Camp Gordon, Georgia, 1,500 to Camp Sevier, S. C. (30th Division), 1,047 to Camp Upton, L. I., and similar detachments to engineer regiments at American University, Washington, D. C., Camp Custer, Fort Leavenworth, Camp Meade and other points, while almost every day small groups left camp for various schools in various instruction centers. The division trained and transferred approximately 40,000 men before it received the permanent personnel which came to France.

By this time, most of the officers with the division had come to believe that the 88th was to be a replacement division and as a consequence, interest in training flagged for the moment. But in February a War Department telegram regarding the disposition of the February draft directed that troops of the Depot Brigade ordered to other camps be transferred to the 88th Division instead, all men transferred to have had at least three months training. Transfers continued fast through April and on the 26th, 9,000 men of the second draft began to arrive, so that at the end of the month the division had 7,539 men.

During the months of December and January, General Plummer and Colonel Lincoln were in France for a course of instruction and study of the Western Front. In the absence of the Commanding General, Brigadier General Robert N. Getty was acting division commander. General Getty had been transferred from the Depot Brigade, September 19th, relieving Brigadier General Ballou as commander of the 175th Infantry Brigade. General Ballou, after commanding the Training Camp for Negro Officers, joined the 163d Depot Brigade.

Shortly after General Plummer's return, he was relieved from assignment as Division Commander on account of physical unfitness for future service abroad and was ordered to Fort Sill to command the post there. General Getty remained in command until he was relieved by Brigadier General Beach of the 176th Brigade, and Brigadier General M. B. Stewart took command of the 175th Brigade.

An entire chapter could well be devoted to the subject of training and other activities which occupied the time of the men at Camp Dodge. Except for a short period in midwinter, when there was a pause in the influx of drafted men and many of the former increment had been sent away, training was of an intensive order. At first the fire breaks and spaces between barracks were used for close order drill and exercise, but the dust storms of October and the increasing sizes of companies as each draft contingent arrived, made it necessary to transfer activities to regimental drill areas in adjoining fields.

As soon as anything like a permanent personnel had been organized, instruction was begun in every branch of the forms of warfare developed by the European hostilities. Trench warfare as practiced since 1914 had brought many new methods and instruments that were strange to American arms. Both officers and men had to acquire an intimate knowledge of these things in addition to the standard Infantry Drill Regulations, Field Service Regulations and Firing Manuals. Schools were therefore established in charge of officers who had attended special schools at certain instruction centers. Officers from the French and British Armies began to arrive at Camp Dodge in the fall of 1917, who acted in an advisory capacity to the training staff and conducted courses in the various schools.

November 5, 1917, schools were established in musketry (rifle and pistol) and heavy machine gun. Schools for grenade warfare, bayonet combat, automatic arms (automatic rifle and light machine gun), field fortifications, gas defense, sniping and camouflage, trench mortar, signal and liaison, 37 mm. gun, intelligence, followed, besides various other schools for packers, horseshoers, mess sergeants, company clerks and cooks and bakers. All instruction was of the most practical sort. Elaborate systems of trenches were constructed by classes from the field fortifications school; gas chambers were constructed where men attending the gas school were obliged to go through rooms filled with gas in order to gain confidence in their gas masks; bayonet courses for training in the new method of bayonet attack were built in regimental drill area and this form of fighting was gone into with absolute thoroughness; small problems were conducted by the school of musketry and snipers were given special courses in camouflage. A model battalion was formed to demonstrate the new platoon formations with the 250-men companies.

While, as stated before, intensive instruction lagged somewhat in midwinter, there was no idleness. The men had not had range firing, and in spite of the cold weather this was taken up. The day before Christmas, the Red Cross issued 16,000 sweaters, 13,000 pairs of socks, 8,000 wristlets, 4,500 mufflers and 600 woolen helmets, which helped immeasurably those organizations which were having target practice during the zero weather in January.

Krag rifles had been received to the number of 10,220 between September 12th and November 1st, while 20,300 of the new U. S. model 1917 Enfield rifle had been received up to January 16, 1918. The men received their first instruction in the handling of the new piece at this time.

Training was not, however, the only side of the soldiers' life at Camp Dodge. They had, at all times, proper and well-directed recreation. Drill was frequently interspersed with competitive games and these lulls in the routine were compulsory as much as any feature of the drill itself. Various welfare societies had constructed huts throughout the camp where there were libraries, writing rooms and musical instruments. Educational courses were offered and many classes in French were conducted.

Toward the last of May, telegrams from the War Department ordering the transfer to the Depot Brigade of all surplus officers and the establishing of a school for intensive training of field and staff officers were interpreted as indicating an early departure of the division overseas.

Finally, on July 22d, a War Department telegram was received containing instructions for the movement of the Division to the Port of Embarkation with special instruction for the Advance Detachment and Billeting Party of 52 officers and men and the advance school detachment of 140 officers and 107 men to be sent at the earliest possible date. The train carrying these two detachments left Camp Dodge the night of July 28th. They were sent to Camp Upton, Long Island, New York, where equipment was checked and completed. On August 3d, the Advance School Detachment sailed on the "Leviathan," formerly the "Vaterland," and arrived at Brest, August 11th. From Brest they proceeded to Chatillon-sur-Seine to the 3d Corps Schools. The Advance Detachment and Billeting Party sailed on the Cunard Liner "Aquitania," August 6th, arriving in Liverpool, August 12th. Following four days spent in rest camps at Liverpool and Southampton, the detachment landed at Cherbourg, August 16th and through a misunderstanding on the part of the R. T. O. at that port proceeded to Tonnerre, Cote d'Or, intended for the Headquarters of the 81st Division. After two days at Tonnerre, the party went on to Semur, Cote d'Or, the 21st Training Area, and established Headquarters there August 20th.

Other organizations followed in their turn, spending from four to seven days in Camp Upton or Camp Mills, being inspected and equipped; and units landing in England spent from one to five days in rest camps before proceeding to France. On August 9th, the 349th Infantry sailed on the White Star Liner "Olympic," arriving at Southampton, August 16th. Parts of the regiment left that same day for Le Havre, the remaining units following the 17th and 18th. The next units to leave the United States were Regimental Headquarters, Headquarters Company, the 1st Battalion, Medical Detachment, Machine Gun Company and Supply Company of the 350th Infantry, which sailed on H. M. S. "Delta," August 11th, arriving at Tilbury-on-Thames, August 25, and at Cherbourg, August 29th. On August 15th, Regimental Headquarters, the 1st Battalion Headquarters, Company "M," Supply Co. and Medical Detachment of the 352d Infantry and the 337th Machine Gun Battalion sailed from New York on the "Ascanius" of the Blue Funnel Line, arriving at Liverpool August 28th and at Cherbourg, September 1st. *

The same day, August 14th, the 339th Machine Gun Battalion sailed from Philadelphia on the "Phens" of the Blue Funnel Line, arriving in Liverpool, August 27th and at Le Havre, August 30th. The 3d Battalion and Company G of the 350th Infantry with the 338th Machine Gun Battalion sailed August 15th from Hoboken on H. M. S. "Kashmir." The remainder of the 350th Infantry sailed the following day on the "Messanabie" and arrived at Liverpool with the H. M. S. "Kashmir," August 28th. Troops aboard these ships debarked at Cherbourg, September 1st. In the same convoy with the "Ascanius" was the U. S. S. "Ulysses," which sailed from Philadelphia, August 15th, carrying the 2d Battalion and the 3d Battalion, less Company "M," of the 352d Infantry, landing at Liverpool, August 28th and at Le Havre two days later. Company "M" sailed from Philadelphia on the "City of Exeter," August 14th, arriving at Manchester the 29th and at Le Havre the 31st. The "Ulysses" carried also the 3d Battalion of the 351st Infantry which debarked in Cherbourg from Southampton, September 6th. The remainder of the 351st Infantry sailed August 16th, on the ships "Saxon" and "Scotian," arriving at Liverpool, August 28th. The French port for these troops was Cherbourg.

Guard House at Camp Dodge

August 18th, the 313th Ammunition Train and 313th Sanitary Train sailed on the "Vedic," arriving at Liverpool, August 31st and at Le Havre, September 5th. The 313th Field Signal Battalion sailed August 17th on H. M. S. "Bohemia," which arrived in Liverpool, August 31st. The French port for the signal battalion was Le Havre. Division Headquarters, Headquarters Detachment and Headquarters Troop embarked at Quebec, August 15th and sailed August 21st on H. M. S. "Demosthenes," from Sydney (Nova Scotia), arriving at Liverpool, August 31st and at Le Havre, September 4th. The 313th Supply Train sailed August 24th on H. M. S. "Empress of Britain," arriving at Liverpool, September 24th, and at Le Havre, September 7th.

The sailing dates of the 163d Field Artillery Brigade and the 313th Trench Mortar Battery are not available at this time, but these units never joined the division in France.

Biography of Major-General William Weigel, U. S. A.

MAJOR-GENERAL WILLIAM WEIGEL was born at New Brunswick, N. J., August 25, 1863. Received his appointment to the United States Military Academy in 1883, graduating on June 11, 1887.

In July and August, 1898, he laid out and established the camp at Montauk Point, Long Island, N. Y., for the reception of troops returning from Cuba. In November, 1898, he was promoted to Captain of Volunteers and was sent to Havana, Cuba, where he remained until December, 1899.

General Weigel sailed for the Philippines with the 11th Infantry on April 5, 1901, where he participated in the Philippine insurrection to its close July 1, 1902. At that time he displayed his qualities as a fighter by holding Bulangiga, Samur, P. I., with 48 men for 16 days against insurgents after the massacre of Company "C," 9th Infantry, September, 1901. He also participated in the Suragao Expedition.

After the Philippine insurrection General Weigel served in various regiments and on numerous details both in the United States and its possessions, receiving many promotions until war was declared upon Germany, which found him a colonel in command of the 1st Infantry at Schofield Barracks, Hawaiian Territory.

On August 5, 1917, he was promoted to Brigadier-General, N. A., and assigned to command the 151st Depot Brigade at Camp Devens, Mass., where he remained until March 23, 1918, when he was given command of the 56th Infantry Brigade of the 28th Division, and it was this organization that he took overseas. While at Camp Devens he was in command of the 7th Division for about three months.

General Weigel arrived in France in May, 1918, with his Brigade and they moved into line along the Marne opposite Chateau-Thierry July 1, 1918. It was here that his Brigade crossed the Marne, passing through Chateau-Thierry, in pursuit of the enemy on July 21, 1918. As Reserve of the 1st Corps his Brigade relieved a brigade of the 26th Division on July 23, 1918, taking two towns—Epieds and Courpoil—and pushed through the Foret-de-Fere to a depth of 15 kilometers. From there he pushed north and relieved the 32d Division in front of Fismes, capturing the city of Fismes that same night and crossing the Vesle River near Chateau-Diable, August 6-7. After making three attempts crossed the Vesle River at Fismes under terrific enemy fire, taking the village of Fismettes, capturing many prisoners. In the general attack September 5, 1918, succeeded in driving the enemy toward the Aisne and his Brigade was relieved from the line on September 10th, after being in the line continuously under fire at all times since July 14th.

On August 26, 1918, he was promoted to the rank of Major-General and assigned to command the 88th Division.

He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal, the Croix-de-Guerre with two Palms, and made a Commander of the Legion of Honor for his excellent work in France.

General Weigel is a born fighter and leader and his wonderful personality has won for him the respect and love of all those ever fortunate enough to serve in his command.

ARRIVAL IN FRANCE

Training and Life in the Trenches

D

IRECT from the rest camps at the ports of debarkation at Cherbourg, Le Havre and Brest, the troops were sent to the newly-organized 21st Training Area in the heart of Cote d'Or. Semur, one of the most beautiful little towns of this picturesque and historic region, was selected for Division Headquarters and was the first seat of the Division's activities in Europe. Students of Caesar's Commentaries will recall that it was at Les Laumes, St. Alesia, about 15 kilometers from Semur, that Julius Caesar won his great victory over one of the fiercest Gallic tribes led so ably by Vercingetorix.

The advance party, consisting for the most part of small billeting detachments, arrived at Semur, August 21st and immediately scattered itself over the wide area in which the units of the command were to be lodged during their preliminary training. Division Headquarters proper arrived a few days later along with the troop trains bearing the rest of the Division, less artillery. The 163d Field Artillery Brigade, which had been with the 88th up to this time, was now separated from the division and went into training at Clermont, Ferrand and Bordeaux. It was destined never to see the front, and returned to the United States shortly after the signing of the armistice.

First Divisional Headquarters Established by the 88th Division after Arrival in France, at Semur, Cote d'Or, France, September 15, 1918

On September 10th, command of the Division passed from Brig. Gen. Wm. D. Beach to Major General William Weigel, recently promoted from a Brigadier General, commanding the 56th Infantry Brigade of the 28th Division and fresh from the Aisne-Marne and the Oise-Aisne offensives.

*Major-General William Weigel, Commanding General,
88th Division*

From the latter part of August until the move of the Division into the Haute Alsace Sector, every energy in the command was devoted to intensive training. The First American Army was winning its first laurels at Saint Mihiel and in the Argonne and every man of the 88th Division was keyed to a high pitch in anticipation of an early opportunity to reach the front. All troops were billeted in small towns surrounding Semur and training was carried out in the recently cutover grain fields and on the unused pasture lands.

The Division had hardly settled itself into the routine of real training, however, when orders came for a hurried move to the front. Directions for the move came in the form of field orders from Headquarters which read:

“Division will move by rail, beginning Sept. 14th, to relieve, in connection with a French Division, a Division now in the line. Battalions will be ready to move at two hours' notice, and in readiness to relieve other units in the line upon arrival. Supply officers will requisition for two days' reserve rations and two days' travel rations per individual.

“Personal equipment of officers in excess of bedding and clothing rolls will be shipped at once to railhead under guard of military police.”

Field Order No. 1 of September 11th designated Belfort as the new Division Headquarters. While transferred to the 7th French Army for tactical purposes, the Division was to pass to the administrative control of the 7th Corps (American).

The Division began leaving Semur September 14th, expecting to go to Belfort. Four trains a day were run until the 18th. The Liaison Officer, who had preceded by one day, intercepted the first train at Besancon with the information that the orders had been changed and the division would stop in the Hericourt (Haute Saone) Area, south of Belfort, with Headquarters at Hericourt. Aside from the fact that it was much closer to the front, the Hericourt Area resembled the Cote d'Or section in many respects and training schedules resumed where they had ended the week before. This training continued until the latter part of the month of September.

Lt. Col. Fay W. Brabson, General Staff, who had been an instructor at the Army General Staff College, joined the 88th Division in September, 1918, as Operations Officer.

Lt. Col. Bennett C. Clark, Infantry, and Maj. E. F. Wood, Infantry, graduates of the 3rd course at Army General Staff College, joined the Division at the same time as Assistant Chief of Staff G-1 and G-2, respectively.

On October 5th, when Col. Lincoln became sick, Col. Brabson took over the duties of Chief of Staff of the Division. He was promoted Colonel later and remained Chief of Staff of the Division until it was demobilized.

As stated in the warning order above, the original plan was for the 88th to relieve a division in the line. The Division referred to was the 29th American Division, then serving its first tour in a quiet sector. However, besides a lack of transportation, the French Staff found the 88th without gas masks or steel helmets and consequently wholly unprepared for duty in the trenches. Hence, instead of sending the 88th to relieve the 29th, the 38th French Division was sent to relieve the 29th. Later, the 88th Division was sent into sector for instruction by the 38th French Division and finally relieved that Division. Official records, General Headquarters, give the date of entry of the 88th Division into the line as October 12th. That was the date command of the front line of the sector passed to battalion commanders, 88th Division. On September 23d, two officers and one hundred men from each of the four Infantry Battalions that were scheduled first to take over the sector had moved by truck at night to the front. Medical and Intelligence Units soon followed, but it was not until October 12th that French front line battalions were wholly relieved by our advance Battalions.

Preparations for the Division's first actual tour of duty in the trenches were begun towards the close of September. Since landing in France, the entire command had been under a schedule of the most intensive sort of training. October first found the men in good physical condition, despite a very severe influenza epidemic. Specialists' schools in every regiment and separate organization had added the finishing touches to individual training earlier acquired in the States and during the brief stop near Semur. At last the Division as a well trained organization was prepared in every way to deliver a mighty blow.

The trenches to be occupied by the Division were those embraced in the Center Sector Haute-Alsace. The distribution of troops under the first allotment of positions was outlined as follows, under Field Order No. 6:

Accordingly, Division Headquarters closed at Hericourt at 8 o'clock, October 7th and opened at Montreux Chateau at the same hour.

Movement of the main bodies of troops was carried out at night and with great secrecy, for the enemy was maintaining close aerial observation of the entire sector at this time. For most of the organizations, the completion of the move required two nights of steady marching. Elements were formed at dusk and marched by parallel roads toward the front, strict march discipline and absolute silence being maintained throughout the moves.

In going into the line, the 88th relieved the 38th French Division, a veteran unit which had distinguished itself in the fighting on practically every front in the war. From October 7th to 17th, the French troops occupied the trenches jointly with the Americans, rendering great assistance to our troops in the matter of trench routine, patrolling and practical duties of a soldier which had been thoroughly studied theoretically in the rear areas. On October 15th, the sector passed under the complete control of the 88th Division and the 38th French Division moved to the sector on the right or south of the 88th Division where it relieved another French Division (51st).

It is well at this point to give a brief description of the general features of the sector as it was organized at the time it passed into the hands of the 88th Division. The entire front was approximately 19 kilometers long. No Man's Land ranged in width from a kilometer at some places to less than 300 meters at others. During the early stages of the war, this territory had been the scene of some of the heaviest fighting, but for the last three and a half years, both sides had come to a standstill and stood facing each other, content to carry on a defensive war for the time being. The French Army had been committed politically to the relief of Alsace-Lorraine as a first step in case of war with Germany. Consequently, we find the general plans called for mobilization in the Belfort-Nancy region. Mulhouse was taken in an early offensive. It was only when France became convinced that Germany was making her principal drive through Belgium that the mobilization in the South was halted and her troops shifted to the North to meet the Germans in Belgium. This depleted her strength to such an extent in the South that she was forced to evacuate Mulhouse and fall back to the outer defense of the Gate of Belfort.

The general physical aspects of the terrain are much similar to those of the Middle West of the United States. It is a rolling country, with considerable wooded areas on both sides of the lines. Trenches in the north half of the sector lay mostly in the open, with small forests covering the lines of communication in rear. On the other hand, the front lines of the southern half traversed the Schonholz and Fulleren woods, giving excellent protection from enemy observation but presenting special danger in the case of sudden hostile bombardment and raids. Offensively the sector offered in the north a splendid terrain for the use of tanks which, launched from concealment in the numerous woods near the front line, could play havoc against the old wire systems and poorly kept up trenches opposite the northern sub-sector, and advancing with the infantry towards Mulhouse, could turn the high table land of Altkirch with comparative ease. Defensively, the sector was weak because of the heavily wooded salient of Bois de Carspach and Schonholz Woods which prevented the placing of machine guns effectively without undue danger of capture by sudden hostile raids.

The old Rhone-Rhine canal bisected the divisional area, traversed No Man's Land and ran into the enemy lines at the towns of Eglingen and Enschingen. For a mile or more to the north and south of this canal, the terrain was low and marshy and partly covered with underbrush.

As a reminder of the fierce fighting which had taken place here in the earlier stages of the war, the entire sector was traversed with abandoned trenches, barbed wire and broken-down strong points. At the time the 88th took over the sector, these trenches were in places partly filled with water, the revetments caved in, some places filled in to the extent that a man while walking on the bottom of the trench would expose his head and shoulders in full view above the parapet.

No Man's Land was a maze of shell holes and old fortifications. As many as eight distinct bands of barbed wire lay in front of our lines at certain points. Little effort had been made to repair these entanglements. In addition, the terrain between the lines was overgrown with brush and weeds, offering excellent opportunities for ambushes and abundant cover for patrolling. The labyrinth of wire and trenches placed apparently without system was the result of the revolution of style of fighting from the open warfare, marking the early offensive that secured Mulhouse, passing through the period when front lines were held strongly, to a stabilized warfare carried to the extreme. When both sides recognized that the war was not to be won in this region, they settled down to holding a maximum of frontage with a minimum of man power. The confusion was added to by the frequent change of commanders and on the part of the Americans by the fact that new Divisions were going into quiet sector here for final training.

The 88th Division immediately assigned the entire 313th engineer regiment to the work of rehabilitating and strengthening the essential parts of the trench system as selected by the Plan of Defense and each infantry brigade commander likewise put companies of infantry to work to clean up and make habitable the dugouts and trenches of their respective subsectors.

At the time the 88th went into the line, the enemy was of the opinion that the French and Americans in this sector were preparing for a large scale attack on the important city of Mulhouse which lay a short distance to the northeast. The presence of the 88th Division at Hericourt while the 29th remained in sector lent color to this belief. As a result, he maintained a constant observation by aeroplane, not only at the front, but in the rear areas as well. Prisoners captured by us stated that they had been cautioned that an attack was impending and that they had been told that the Americans had massed great numbers of tanks behind the lines to prepare the way at the opening of the drive.

The German troops facing our sector constituted two of the Divisions of the Army Detachment "B." The Army was commanded by General V. Gundell with his headquarters at Colmar.

The 30th Bavarian Reserve Division was commanded by Lieut. Gen. Beeg with Headquarters at Colmar. This Division had one regiment in line opposite our sector from the Rhone-Rhine canal to our northern boundary with two regiments at rest in the rear.

The 44th Landwehr Division was commanded by Gen. D. Inf. Krause with Headquarters at Mulhouse. This Division had two regiments in line opposite our sector from the Rhone-Rhine canal to our southern boundary. One regiment in reserve. A school of Aviation was located a short distance behind the German lines. This gave them superiority of the air as we had very few planes to aid us. In addition several special troops were located in the sector, among them a crack company of shock troops which were used in all raids.

The distribution of our division at the time the 88th took over the line was as follows:

The first regiments to occupy the trenches with the French were the 350th and 351st Infantry regiments. Each placed two battalions in the front line and one in support. The other two infantry regiments, the 349th and 352d, were stationed in reserve immediately in rear.

The 29th U. S. Division and the 38th French Division had discovered that Ammertzwiller and other towns on the boundary of the enemy territory were not held in their entirety nor occupied continually by enemy forces. The 7th French Army Commander accordingly directed that such portions of territory be taken over and amalgamated into our holdings. The hostile salient at Ammertzwiller in particular favored seizure and consolidation into our own lines. It was partially encompassed on the north and south by salients already existing within our own lines and the simple expedient of digging two short trenches across No Mau's Land centered a short distance within the point of the hostile salient would cause a junction that would take in the desired portion of Ammertzwiller.

Street Scene in Dannemarie, Haute Alsace Sector

The first casualties in action in the Division came on the night of October 12th-13th when the enemy launched a raid on the 2d Battalion, 350th Infantry preparing to effect this plan. During the attack, Captain Peter V. Brethorst, Company "F," Sergeant J. A. Hora, Privates Fred G. Ekstrom and Clinton F. Leasan, Company "F," and Privates Willie Leroy, Fred R. Creswell and Pat Morris, Company "G," were struck by shrapnel and fatally wounded. Captains Henry A. House, Company "E" and Orren E. Safford, Company "G," with eight enlisted men, were caught in No Man's Land while reconnoitering and captured by the raiders, who were repulsed, however, before they reached the front line trenches. Approximately eighteen Americans and three Frenchmen were wounded more or less severely during the action, in addition to the killed and captured. One officer and four enlisted men (American) were awarded the Croix de Guerre by the French for gallant conduct in repelling the raid.

A report of the engagement made to Headquarters was as follows:

"On the night of October 12th-13th, 1918, two working parties were sent out from the 350th Infantry under command of Capt. Safford and Capt. House, respectively, their mission being to connect the advance line with the first German trench at Ammertzwiller. These two detachments were each to be protected by French covering detachments. These were provided by reconnaissance parties which included a number of officers and N. C. O's. It was reported that these covering parties were late in arriving and the reconnaissance parties were cut off by a Minenwerfer barrage in advance of our front lines. This was at 19 hours, at the same time our own barrage was laid down by the French artillery in support. The reconnaissance party took shelter in old shell holes and dugouts. When the hostile barrage moved back, they were trapped by a German raiding party which followed its own barrage. The entire party were taken captive with the exception of one French Lieutenant, one machine gun officer and one 2d Lieutenant of the 2d Battalion, 350th Infantry.

"The working party in which Capt. Brethorst and several of his men were killed was near the entrance of Ba'schwiller and was caught by the German barrage as it moved back."

On the following night, October 13th -14th, an advance of the front lines of the 350th sector into the villages of Ammertzwiller and Englingen was ordered by the French Headquarters. The attack was launched at dawn, 14th October, in conjunction with French troops. Company D, in the 1st Battalion sector, penetrated into Ammertzwiller undiscovered by the enemy, and established outposts. Company H in the 2d Battalion sector, occupied the hostile front line in Enschingen at the same hour. At daybreak, the enemy discovered our outposts in Ammertzwiller and immediately attacked, at the same time putting down an artillery harassing fire on the American-French support. The six outposts, although outnumbered, held off the initial attack, then gradually withdrew into some old trenches, where they remained until night and retired, by order, under the cover of darkness. One American was captured. None were killed or wounded. Four Croix de Guerre were awarded as a result of citations in orders 38th French Division to members of the 88th Division for courageous conduct in this engagement. The attacking party from the 2d Battalion remained undiscovered in the enemy lines in Enschingen for several hours after the 1st Battalion outposts had fallen back, and began to consolidate, but were later ordered to withdraw.

Aside from these two actions, the north half of the division sector saw little of the enemy during the month of October. On October 19th, the 3rd Battalion of the 349th Infantry relieved the 1st Battalion of the 350th Infantry in the Center of Resistance Gildwiller and the 3d Battalion of the 350th Infantry took over the Center of Resistance Balschwiller from the 2d Battalion of the same regiment at approximately the same time. By this time, the Germans had been sufficiently impressed with the fighting qualities of the Americans to keep carefully out of hand-to-hand range. As a result, there was little further activity on their part aside from occasional patrols, few of which ever penetrated our wire.

The American troops, on the other hand, entered No-Man's Land every night almost where they pleased. The German trenches were frequently explored and all sorts of German equipment, including gas alarms, telephone apparatus, and trench signs were brought back as souvenirs.

The 3rd Battalion, 350th Infantry, was relieved in Center of Resistance Balschwiller by the 2d Battalion, 349th Infantry, October 29th. The 1st Battalion, 349th Infantry, would have gone into the line in the Gildwiller sector a few days later but for the order relieving the division in this area and sending it into the Toul Region.

Machine gun posts in the north sub-sector of the division line were maintained throughout the tour by the 338th Machine Gun Battalion. From October 7th to 23d, Company D of the Battalion was stationed at Guevenatten and Company B at Traubach le Bas. On October 23d, Company A relieved Company D and Company C took over the Traubach region from Company B.

The third event of importance in the Division sector took place October 18th, when the enemy attempted a raid on the 351st Infantry in Schonholz Woods.

Schonholz woods formed an extreme salient in the center of our sector. Located on a steep hill sloping toward the German lines with our communicating trenches visible to the enemy, it was one of the most difficult parts of the entire terrain to hold or to support. The lines were within a few hundred meters of each other and both being in the same woods, observation was mutually difficult and it was almost impossible to ward off surprise. The Germans were in the habit of raiding this point to capture prisoners at least one or two times each month.

Company I of the 351st Infantry was given the task of first defending the salient and was the first element of the division to repulse a raid there. A heavy fog had settled over the entire sector on the morning of October 18th, affording the best condition possible for a raiding party. At 11:05 A. M., a sergeant of Company I saw three Germans about forty yards in front of Post 57-B Schonholz Woods and immediately gave an alarm. The Germans threw several potato masher grenades and opened fire with rifle grenades. The Americans opened fire and one German was seen to fall; his body was not located. The Germans attempted to cut off the 3d Platoon which was stationed at the most advanced part of the salient. However, due to the pluck of the Americans the raid was completely repulsed in a few moments and the Germans were compelled to withdraw, laying down a smoke screen as they hurried back to their lines. The casualties were Private Edgar L. McCord, Company I, 351st Infantry, killed at his post, and Private Harley Miller of the same organization, wounded. The raid lasted about twenty minutes. The strength of the raiding party is not known. The withdrawal of the raiding party was covered by an artillery barrage.

During the time the 351st Infantry held the southern sub-sector, very little happened except for the bombardment on the night of October 12th and the raid on Schonholz woods.

On the night of October 21th, the 2d Battalion, 352d Infantry, moved forward and relieved the 1st Battalion, 351st Infantry, in the Badricourt Sector, the 3d Battalion, 352d Infantry, relieved the 3d Battalion, 351st Infantry, the same night in the Hagenbach sector. The marching was done after dark. This made necessary the placing of connecting files at intervals of ten feet between platoons.

On October 24th, the Fulleren Sector on the South—about three kilometers frontage—was added to the sector originally assigned to the Division. This extension of front was made necessary because the 88th Division which had gone into sector south of the 88th Division was very much depleted—the companies being reduced to approximately thirty-five men. The extension of front made necessary a rearrangement of the 88th Division in sector. The northern sub-sector still was held with two battalions of the front line regiment in the front area. In the southern sub-sector, all three battalions of the 352d Infantry were put in the front zone and a battalion of the 351st Infantry was brought up to general supporting position at Manspach.

On the night of October 27th, the 1st Battalion, 352d Infantry, relieved the 2d Battalion, 351st Infantry, in the Fulleren sector without incident. The 1st Battalion, 352d Infantry, was supported by Company B, 339th Machine Gun Battalion and the 2d Battalion by Company C, 339th Machine Gun Battalion; 3d Battalion by the 352d Machine Gun Company.

During the period the 351st and 352d Infantry were in line, they held a front which was more extended than that of the 349th and 350th Infantry. This was due to the addition of the Fulleren sector on the 24th of October. The Fulleren sector was found to be well organized. In the early part of the war, a French Corps had been concentrated in rear of this narrow front.

Disappointed in their failure to carry through to success the first raid against the 351st Infantry, the Germans attempted a second assault October 31st. At 8:50 A. M., they placed a barrage lasting about twenty minutes on the Schonholz salient, which was held at that time by Company "I," 352d Infantry. During the early part of the bombardment about thirty shells fell on Company "M" sector which was on the left or north. A machine gun was located at that point and it was evident they were trying to shell it out, but were unsuccessful. The artillery observation post promptly reported this hostile barrage and Division Headquarters directed the French artillery commander to lay down his S. O. S. barrage covering this section.

As soon as the hostile barrage lifted, about forty Germans came over the bluff converging on an isolated post at the extreme point of the salient. Nine men of Company I were stationed at the post with two automatic rifles. All of them were in a dugout with the exception of Private Crosby and Private Boyd. Private Boyd was wounded in the early part of the engagement. Corporal Johnson came out of the dugout and ordered Private Boyd to the rear. The rest of the men in the dugout attempted to get out, but a grenade exploded at the entrance wounding the leading man, throwing him back against the others. In the meantime, Corporal Johnson got into the fight with the auto rifle relinquished by Private Boyd. As soon as the Germans were in sight Corporal Johnson and Private Crosby opened fire with auto rifles and hand grenades. Corporal Johnson's auto rifle jammed three times because of dirt thrown into the mechanism of the gun by the explosion of hand grenades and shrapnel. He stopped firing while grenades and pistol shots were falling all around him and the Germans continued to advance. He continued work on the rifle until it was repaired and then fired four clips and threw about twenty-five hand grenades at enemy until he checked them immediately in front of the post. Both of these men remained at their positions throughout the attack and repulsed the enemy so that they were unable to pass the line of observation. Private Crosby was severely wounded through the arms and legs and was finally overcome by the enemy who knocked him down and carried away his auto rifle. Two of the Germans were left behind, one dead and one severely wounded. The latter died a short time afterward. The wounded German stated that the raiding party consisted of forty men of the 382d Landwehr Regiment. They had left their lines at 5:00 A. M., and had come over in front of our wire just under the bluff at Schonholz woods. They had remained there until their preparatory barrage lifted, when they attacked. Their mission was to take prisoners.

Aside from the four raids mentioned above, the 88th participated in no further combat during its tour in this sector. In retiring from the line in early November, however, it left the enemy with a healthy conception of its fighting qualities. After the first week of the division's period of duty in the Haute-Alsace Sector, the enemy assumed an attitude almost entirely defensive. Our patrols crossed No Man's Land at will and penetrated the German lines at practically every point without opposition.

The Division had demonstrated to the satisfaction of both the French and American high commands that it was gaining a practical experience that would fit it for offensive major operations. The morale of the troops was excellent, their fighting qualities had been amply demonstrated in the four raids, and in every regard the command was fully prepared to take a full share in any major offensive for which it might be selected.

General Paulinier, commanding the 10th French Corps, acting under orders of General de Mitrey, commanding the 7th French Army, had directed the preparation of detailed plans with sketches and amounts of artillery ammunition to cover a series of raids along the front of the division. Preparatory to submitting these plans on November 3d, the division intelligence section made a series of extended patrols, penetrating the enemy's lines to supporting trenches. The withdrawal of the division from sector prevented the carrying out of any of these projects. Up to the time these detailed plans for raids were ordered, the French High Command had discouraged in every way the firing of artillery ammunition, particularly 75 mm. Primarily, they opposed further destruction of Alsatian villages, like Carspach and Altkirch, which up to this time had not suffered extensively. Second, the amount of ammunition used in the Argonne and in the northern drives had depleted the allied reserve of artillery ammunition to a dangerous point, and artillery ammunition was to be expended only defensively, in quiet sectors.

In compliance with Field Order No. 8, 88th Division, the command was withdrawn from sector and relieved by the 154th French Division on November 4th. On November 3d, orders were received by the Division Commander calling for a hurried move of one of the infantry brigades to the Toul region to support the proposed drive of the newly organized Second American Army. The rest of the division was to follow speedily.

Accordingly, Division Headquarters closed at Novillard at 10 o'clock, November 3d, and opened at Valdoie, a suburb of Belfort, at the same hour. The division P. C. at Montreux Chateau made a similar change the following day. On November 8th the P. C. closed at Valdoie and opened at Lagny (Meurthe et Moselle), northwest of Toul.

In accordance with Field Order No. 9, the 175th Brigade began entraining at Belfort, November 6th, for the Bernecourt and Pagny-sur-Meuse areas, where the brigade was to act as reserve for the IV Corps, Second Army (American). It remained in that capacity until returned to the command of the 33th Division, in reserve of the Second Army, November 10th. The last of the division entrained at Belfort for the new area November 11th, the day on which the armistice went into effect at 11 o'clock.

At the juncture in the hostilities when the division was withdrawn from Alsace and sent north, the battle line had receded toward Germany through northern France and Belgium, but there was not much change in the Lorraine country. The situation for the enemy at the beginning of November was critical in the extreme, but he still clung tenaciously to the area about Metz.

A decisive blow there that would be successful enough even to isolate Metz would render further military resistance not only futile but practically impossible. It was to join in such a movement that the 33th Division left the comparatively quiet Alsace sector, which was used normally as a training sector for the Americans and a rest area for the French. Now the division was to see real war.

There is more to be said about what was planned for the Second American Army under Lieut. Gen. Robert Lee Bullard than about what was actually accomplished. The operations have been referred to as "The Battle that was to Be." As has been said, the Allied armies were advancing everywhere from Holland to Metz, except in the sector fronting Metz itself, or that portion between Ornes and the Moselle. The movement of the Second American Army was to embrace a northward swing between Fresnes and Port-sur-Seille, pivoting its right on the front of the Metz fortress and advancing the left to the west of it in conformity with the still more sweeping movements of the First American Army near the Meuse.

As soon as the Second Army should be well under way, it was planned by Marshal Foch, supreme Allied chief, to launch the Tenth French Army under General Mangin, southeast of Metz, in the direction of Chateau-Salins. The Second American Army would carry its attack northward toward Conflans; the Tenth French Army would move northeast and east toward the Saar and the Rhine. Both would avoid direct attack on Metz, which would be engulfed between them.

The remainder of the German line, between the Tenth Army's right and the Swiss border, including the portion which had been held by the 88th Division in Alsace, would thus be outflanked and have to fall back. This portion had not received much aggressive attention from either side for a long period. Neither side found it advisable to operate extensively there.

ALTKIRCH BELFORT

The Second Army's advance, for which the 38th Division had arrived in reserve, was to begin November 10th, with four divisions in line and five in reserve along its front of 50 kilometers. The 10th Army was to move forward its ten divisions, on November 11th, on a 90 kilometer front, its forces to be augmented later.

On November 8th, the Second Army had the 92d, 7th, 28th and 33d Divisions from right to left, in line. In support, or moving into support, the 2d Army had the 88th, 4th, 35th and 82d American, and the 26th French Divisions, besides the 85th Division designated to furnish replacement troops for the Second Army. The greater part of the ground thus held was that which had been occupied about September 15th, after the ejection of the enemy from the St. Mihiel salient.

General Bullard issued detailed instructions for the attack November 6th. It was necessary to concentrate the troops and much artillery, so the drive was first set for November 11th, but the enemy, demoralized by reverses everywhere and the recent withdrawal of Austro-Hungarian troops from this front with the surrender of that nation, continued a rapid retrogression. This demanded earlier movement, and the attack was delivered on the morning of the 10th.

Facing the Second American Army at this time, the hostile troops which the 88th Division was scheduled soon to fight, were Bavarian, Landwehr and Reserve troops of General von Fuch's Army, Detachment "C" of General Von Gallwitz Army Group, also troops of General von Bothmer's XIXth Army of the Army Group of the Duke of Wurttemberg.

Headquarters of Fourth Army Corps, A. E. F., at Boucq, Toul Sector, October, 1918

Graves of 88th men near Hericourt

At 7 o'clock, the morning of November 10th, Maj. Gen. Charles C. Ballou, formerly in command of the 163d Depot Brigade at Camp Dodge and later promoted and given command of the 92d Division, began an advance with the 365th Infantry of the 92d Division (colored) behind a rolling barrage, on the east side of the Moselle. The enemy's outpost line was driven back from one and one-half to two and one-half kilometers, when the resistance stiffened in the afternoon. Bois Frehaut, Bois de Voivrotte and Bois de Cheminot had been occupied. The attack was renewed at 5 o'clock on the morning of the 11th against lively artillery and machine gun opposition, and ground lost the day before had been regained when hostilities ceased at 11 o'clock.

Meanwhile the 7th, 28th and 33d Divisions had gotten under way on the morning of the 10th and made progress despite severe resistance, especially from machine gun nests. Two companies of the 56th Infantry, 7th Division, lost 40 per cent of their number in taking and attempting to hold Preny Ridge.

In this fighting, halted so soon by the armistice, the Second Army had 1,380 casualties, according to unofficial reports. The 7th, 28th and 92d Divisions each suffered practically alike. The 33d Division lost 614. The enemy captured 7 officers and 178 enlisted men. The 92d and 7th Divisions were practically new to offensive employment, but compared most favorably with the more experienced organizations.

Meanwhile, the 88th Division waited on its arms, literally, for the expected order to move forward at "H hour" on "D day"—the order that never came. The roar of the big guns could be heard from the battle line.

The one visible reminder of the nearby presence of the enemy was the destruction by anti-aircraft guns of a two seater German biplane that was shot down in flames, Sunday, November 10th, at 12:30 P. M., and fell in one of the towns occupied by the 351st Infantry—Villey St. Etienne.

All night the 10th-11th, the guns redoubled their violence and frequency of their reports and the heavens were kept aflame with the signal pyrotechnics of all colors and combinations.

At daylight the rattle of musketry and machine guns supporting the infantry attack vied with the field guns of the supporting barrage and the big guns of the counter battery and harassing fire. About 10:20, the firing almost ceased, but sporadically broke out afresh just before 11 o'clock, as if a final salvo of hate was being launched by both sides. Promptly at 11 o'clock a great hush fell upon the whole line, followed by cheers and shouts of joy as both sides stood up in position and wondered that such a thing as Peace could really be.

HEADQUARTERS, 88TH DIVISION
American Expeditionary Forces

General Orders
No. 26.

France, 13th May, 1919.

I. The unexpected hastening home of the Division renders an assembly of the entire Command before embarkation practically impossible; likewise, the assembly of the Division in the United States as a body, prior to demobilization, is problematical—hence, commendation and farewell in written form becomes necessary, rather than a personal greeting which would have been preferred.

II. It was with great pride and gratification that the Division Commander published the praise accorded the Division by the Commander-in-Chief on the occasion of his inspection and review on April 19, 1919, in which the Commander-in-Chief states that "the appearance and bearing of all ranks was clear evidence of the high morale that permeates your command" and that "each individual in your command may return home, satisfied that he has done his full duty and proud that he has had the opportunity of being a member of one of our fighting organizations"—and expressing his thanks to "the officers and men of the 88th Division for their willing and efficient service since they became a part of the American Expeditionary Forces."

To this may be added, the unstinted praise for the fine appearance, morale and record of the 88th Division, as expressed to the Division Commander by the Honorable Secretary of War, Newton D. Baker, who favored us with his presence on this occasion and addressed the Command.

Ruins of Bridge near Fulleron Woods, Haute Alsace

Graves of 88th men near Hericourt, on road to Vyans

III. The Corps Commander has likewise given the Division his praise, in the following words: "The high discipline and soldierly bearing of the Division demonstrate a high state of morale and reflect credit upon the elements of command and leadership in all grades. Every demand made upon the Division has been met by the most cheerful response and the most loyal compliance."

IV. To all the above the Division Commander desires to express at this time his sincere appreciation of the willing, efficient, and loyal support given him by every officer and every man of the Command at all times; meeting every emergency in training, and in the field, with that same spirit of friendly rivalry in each individual and organization such as to inculcate proper pride and esprit de corps.

As you return to your civil pursuits, on the farm, in the counting-house, or in other occupation, your military training will ever remain not only a national asset, but an individual one in your respect and subordination toward employers and also in a just control and direction of subordinates.

The Division Commander regrets the severance of the most agreeable relations owing to the termination of your military careers; and desires to thank every officer and man for the constant loyal support given him.

WILLIAM WEIGEL,
Major General, U. S. A.

General Orders
No. 78

I. The Division Commander takes pleasure in announcing that the 38th Infantry Division (French) has seen fit to cite in orders the names of certain members of the 38th Division, and has presented to these members the Croix de Guerre.

1. The extract of the 38th Division orders awarding the Croix de Guerre with silver star follows:

Lieutenant Lowell Forbes, 350th Infantry.

"Energetic and courageous officer, charged with carrying out, with his platoon, a very delicate mission on October 11th, 1918, acquitted himself of such mission perfectly, and, incidentally, took two prisoners."

Corporal Richard Franta, 350th Infantry.

"A very brave corporal. While in charge of an advance post in a village which his section had just occupied, did maintain his position under very difficult circumstances, due to his calmness and presence of mind in the face of the enemy."

Private Ernest Nierman, 350th Infantry.

"During a hostile raid attempted during the night of 12-13 October, he did valiantly defend a bayou through which the enemy endeavored to penetrate into our lines."

Sergeant Burdick Polielt, 350th Infantry.

"An excellent non-commissioned officer. During the night of 12-13 October, when the enemy attempted a raid on our line, he gave proof of the greatest activity and absolute scorn of danger, going from one post to another to organize the defense, under an extremely violent bombardment."

Sergeant Arthur Gude, 350th Infantry.

"An excellent non-commissioned officer. During the night of 12-13 October, when the enemy attempted a raid on our line, he gave proof of the greatest activity and absolute scorn of danger, going from one post to another to organize the defense, under an extremely violent bombardment."

Lieutenant Oscar Nelson, 350th Infantry.

"He excited comment by his spirit during a daring reconnaissance made in enemy lines the night of 11-12 October, 1918. Being in reserve the 12th Oct. at the moment when the enemy was attempting a raid on our lines, he voluntarily went to the position of the attacked company and there gave proof of the greatest activity and of an absolute scorn of danger."

2. Citation by order of the French Brigade of the Croix de Guerre with bronze star follows:

Private Emanuel Hauff, 350th Infantry.

"An automatic rifleman of great courage. Seeing a German non-commissioned officer, Private Hauff shot at his feet without wounding him, in order to allow the capture of the enemy. This action permitted the non-commissioned officer to be taken prisoner immediately."

HEADQUARTERS 88TH DIVISION
American Expeditionary Forces

France, 29 April, 1919.

General Orders
No. 23

1. The Commanding General, 88th Division, American Expeditionary Forces, France, takes pleasure in announcing that the following officers and enlisted men of the 88th Division are given Division Citations as set forth opposite their respective names, for acts of heroism in operations with the 88th Division and with other American Divisions:

Private Harold H. Crosby, 2704204, Company "I," 352d Infantry.

"On October 31st, 1918, Private Crosby, with another man, occupied an isolated post in front of Company 'I' sector, Altkirch, Alsace, during a heavy box barrage laid down by the enemy. Private Crosby was wounded several times, but continued to fight, and with extreme bravery and coolness, repulsed the enemy until he was overcome by the severeness of his wounds, when he was overpowered, beaten, kicked and clubbed by the enemy. After losing one hand, he still endeavored to fire his automatic rifle with the other."

Sergeant Hans Johnson, 2185290, Company "I," 352d Infantry.

"On October 31st, 1918, during a raid by the enemy, a heavy box barrage was laid around part of the sector held by Company 'I,' 352d Infantry, near Altkirch, Alsace. Sergeant Johnson, then a Corporal, was in charge of one of the isolated posts. At the beginning of the barrage he came out of his dugout and made his way forward. Throughout the engagement he fought with great coolness and fortitude with his automatic rifle and when the same jammed, caused by the explosion of a grenade on the parapet, he took it apart and repaired it with one hand, while he kept the enemy back by throwing hand grenades with the other, and although wounded, he continued to fight and was responsible, with one Private Harold H. Crosby, in repulsing the attack of forty of the enemy."

Private First Class John Zehren, Jr., 2162937, Company "L," 352d Infantry.

"On the morning of October 31st, 1918, while Company 'L,' 352d Infantry, was occupying the front line trenches in the Altkirch sector, Alsace, the enemy laid down a heavy barrage around Company 'I' sector on the left, overlapping the fourth platoon of Company 'L,' 352d Infantry. Private Zehren, in his capacity as fourth platoon runner, exhibited great heroism and courage in delivering messages through the barrage to the P. C. of his company commander."

Wagoner Frank Welninski, 2704606, Supply Company, 352d Infantry.

"At Ballersdorf in the C. R. of Badricourt, Alsace, on the 2d November, 1918, Wagoner Welninski exhibited great courage and, regardless of his own personal safety, continued to drive his water cart through heavy shell fire to assist in bringing up supplies to forward troops."

Wagoner Lars E. Dahlin, 2703975, Supply Company, 352d Infantry.

"At Ballersdorf in the C. R. of Badricourt, Alsace, on the 2d November, 1918, Wagoner Dahlin exhibited great courage and, regardless of his own personal safety, continued to drive his ration cart, loaded with supplies for forward troops, through heavy shell fire. During this period three spokes of a wheel on his wagon were cut out by shrapnel."

Second Lieutenant Donald C. Elder, Company "L," 352d Infantry.

"On the morning of October 31st, 1918, during the occupancy of Company 'L,' 352d Infantry, of a portion of the front line trenches in the Altkirch sector, Alsace, a heavy box barrage was laid down by the enemy in Company 'I' sector. This barrage overlapped the sector of the 11th platoon of Company 'L' on the left, which was under the command of 2d Lt. Donald C. Elder. Lt. Elder was severely wounded in the neck by shrapnel while directing his men outside of his P. C. in the early stage of the bombardment. After having received first-aid he exhibited great courage, fortitude and presence of mind; he went forward under heavy fire and took command of an isolated post of six men, where he continued to encourage those under him to resist the enemy until the close of the engagement."

Major George H. Russ, Jr., Commanding 2d Battalion, 352d Infantry.

"On the morning of November 2d, 1918, in C. R. of Badricourt, Alsace, Major George H. Russ, Jr., was in the act of returning from a tour of inspection of Observation Posts located near the front line, when hostile artillery (150's) opened shrapnel fire on line of redoubts. A Supply Wagon and Water Cart were caught in this fire. The spokes were shot out of the wheels of the Supply Wagon, and large pieces of shrapnel struck the water cart. On seeing a third wagon about to enter the zone of fire, this officer, without regard to his personal safety, passed through the zone and ordered this wagon back to the Battalion P. C. After a few minutes observation of the character of the fire, this officer saw that it was creeping toward an out-post consisting of a squad in position in a shallow trench, and that they would soon be directly in line of the fire. Here again, with great coolness and fortitude, he passed back through the zone under fire and ordered the squad forward out of danger, setting an example of bravery which inspired his command."

Private First Class Leonard Harrison Ross, 3298469, Hq. Co., 351st Infantry.

"This telephone operator, on the night of 12th October, 1918, at Eglingen, Alsace, during heavy artillery bombardment of high explosive and gas, which continued to cut lateral lines of communication and those to his Battalion P. C., skillfully repaired these lines, wearing his gas mask the while, thus maintaining constant communication between the right flank unit and the Battalion P. C."

Sergeant Boyd Mael, 2156737, Company "K," 351st Infantry.

"On October 12, 1918, near Eglingen, Alsace, this soldier displayed extraordinary bravery and coolness while under heavy bombardment of high explosive and gas shells, in establishing and maintaining liaison between the platoon P. C. and front line trenches, and in guiding his platoon commander to the front lines, which were at that time under heavy fire."

Private First Class Charles A. Lyons, 3309525, Company "D," 350th Infantry.

"On 14th October, 1918, during an attack by the Germans at Ammertzwiller, Alsace, Private Lyons, together with another American and one Frenchman, were being surrounded. Private Lyons killed one of the enemy who was barring their escape, thus preventing the capture of all three."

Private Anthony Mernofski, 3724703, Company "D," 350th Infantry.

"During an attack at Ammertzwiller, Alsace, on October 14th, 1918, by a large number of Germans, Private Mernofski held the enemy with hand grenades until he was wounded and captured, thus allowing the safe escape of several of his comrades."

First Lieutenant Edgar Campbell, Company "H," 350th Infantry.

"During a heavy bombardment on the night of October 12, 1918, at Balschwiller, Lt. Campbell exhibited unusual coolness in leading his platoon from a heavily shelled area to a place of safety, and sent reports of the situation promptly to Company P. C."

Second Lieutenant William H. Nourse, Company "H," 350th Infantry.

Second Lieutenant Stanley J. O'Connor, Company "H," 350th Infantry.

"During heavy bombardment of the front line on the night of October 12th, 1918, at Balschwiller, Lt. Nourse and Lt. O'Connor personally visited the posts of their respective platoons, the co-ordinates of which were accurately known to the enemy, and removed their men to a place of safety, thereby avoiding heavy casualties; and sent a report of the situation promptly to Company P. C."

Mechanic George W. Hinchcliffe, 3230644, Company "H," 350th Infantry.

"During a heavy bombardment at Balschwiller on the night of October 12, 1918, Mechanic Hinchcliffe exhibited great bravery and coolness in directing the evacuation of the wounded to the Battalion dressing station, remaining in the heavily shelled area for that purpose, with utter disregard for his own safety."

Private First Class Harvey M. Dorris, 323882, Company "H," 350th Infantry.

"During a heavy bombardment at Balschwiller on the night of October 12, 1918, Private Dorris voluntarily and with absolute disregard for his own safety directed and helped remove sick men from an exposed position to a place of safety."

Corporal Horace A. Lore, 2155354, Company "H," 350th Infantry.

Corporal Clarence O. Sullivan, 3231147, Company "H," 350th Infantry.

"After having entered and occupied the enemy front line opposite Balschwiller with a detail of American and French soldiers and being cut off from communication with our own troops, Corporals Lore and Sullivan volunteered to return across No Man's Land to our own lines for the purpose of obtaining food for the detail in disregard of the advice of the more experienced French soldiers. They did this and returned with food for the detail, having made the trip over open ground and under constant observation of the enemy."

Second Lieutenant Raymond L. Abel, Company "G," 350th Infantry.

"On October 12, 1918, at Balschwiller, Alsace, during a German raid Lt. Abel showed coolness and absolute disregard for his own safety while under bombardment of guns of heavy caliber; visiting all the posts in his platoon sector, encouraging the men, and by so doing the enemy were driven out of a position in salient which they had penetrated in the center of company sector."

Sergeant John Aschemann, 2857296, Company "G," 350th Infantry.

Private First Class Lester Clark, 3230958, Company "G," 350th Infantry.

"On October 12, 1918, in Balschwiller, Alsace, during a German raid on our trenches the above-named soldiers stuck to their posts during intensive bombardment of guns of heavy caliber and succeeded in driving out a detachment of the enemy which had penetrated a salient in the center of company sector; and, by their acts of bravery, defeated the plans of the enemy."

Captain Peter V. Brethorst, 350th Infantry. (Posthumous Citation.)

"On the night of October 12, 1918, at Balschwiller, Haute-Alsace, a heavy bombardment by hostile artillery was laid on his company, proceeding in column of half platoons along a ranged road immediately behind the first line trenches. This officer passed along the line several times, issuing orders and placing his men in safety, before taking cover himself. His coolness was responsible for saving the lives of many of his own men. He was fatally wounded in carrying out this plan."

Private Lewis R. Eads, 3232336, Company "D," 350th Infantry.

Private Jacob A. Hoover, 3231100, Company "D," 350th Infantry.

Private Joseph O. Horton, 3231092, Company "D," 350th Infantry.

"At Ammertzwiller, Haute-Alsace, on the 11th of October, 1918, the American-French outposts were attacked at dawn by the Germans and driven in. After capturing a German soldier, these men were cut off from retreat. They escaped capture by concealing themselves, with their prisoner, in an old cellar; remained there during an artillery bombardment throughout the day, and returned the next night with their prisoner to their own lines, displaying unusual coolness under trying circumstances."

First Lieutenant George W. Prichard, Co. "D," 338th Machine Gun Battalion.

"On the night of October 12, 1918, near Balschwiller, Haute-Alsace, this officer was ordered to make, in company with other officers and non-commissioned officers, a reconnaissance of an advanced position preliminary to the arrival of a working party. During the reconnaissance the group was surrounded and captured by an enemy raiding party. This officer, by his coolness and wit, effected his escape from his captors and worked his way back to our lines."

Sergeant Bernard Flannery, 2147020, Company "D," 338th Machine Gun Battalion.

"On October 12, 1918, near Balschwiller, Haute-Alsace, this Sergeant was ordered to make, in company with a number of officers and non-commissioned officers, a reconnaissance of an advanced position preliminary to the arrival of a working party. During the reconnaissance the group was surrounded and captured by an enemy raiding party. This non-commissioned officer, by his coolness and ingenuity, effected his escape from his captors and worked his way back to our lines."

Sergeant Morris I. McKenna, 2176124, Company "D," 338th Machine Gun Battalion.

"On the night of October 12, 1918, near Balschwiller, Haute-Alsace, while in command of a detail of twenty men, this sergeant located, and successfully conducted his men through the intense darkness and an enemy bombardment to an officer near another town to whom he had been directed to deliver his detail. While so doing, two of his men were wounded. He directed their evacuation, maintained the formation of his detail, and in spite of all difficulties accomplished his mission, showing throughout great coolness and devotion to duty."

Sergeant Hugh Jones, 1674959, Headquarters Troop, 88th Division.

"On August 20, 1918, at Montaon Farm, France, this soldier, being in charge of the Headquarters Depot, 56th Infantry Brigade, 28th Division, A. E. F., while under heavy artillery bombardment, with entire disregard to his personal safety, did see that his men were sent to cover, did assist in carrying two sorely wounded men to safety; and then did insist upon remaining in the open for three hours in order to direct any runners or signalmen to safety."

Captain Harry Burnett, Infantry A. D. C., 88th Division.

"On August 20th, 1918, at Montaon Farm, France, Captain Burnett being on duty as A. D. C. of Commanding General, 56th Infantry Brigade, 28th Division, A. E. F., while under heavy artillery bombardment, with entire disregard to his personal safety, did see that the men of the detachment were sent to cover, did assist in carrying two badly wounded men to safety; and did remain on duty in the open directing runners and signalmen to safety."

"On September 6, 1918, near Vilette, France, Captain Burnett did deliver important messages to the forward elements of the 111th Infantry, operating across the Vesle river, northeast of Vilette, at a time when the area was so badly shelled that it was necessary to use sidecars with duplicate messages in order to assure one message getting through."

Captain George E. Wilkinson, A. D. C., Cavalry, 88th Division.

"On August 20, 1918, at Montau Farm, France, Captain Wilkinson, being on duty as A. D. C. of Commanding General, 56th Infantry Brigade, 23th Division, A. E. F., while under heavy artillery bombardment, with entire disregard to his personal safety, did see that the men of the detachment were sent to cover, did assist in carrying two badly wounded men to safety; and did remain on duty in the open directing runners and signalmen to safety. "

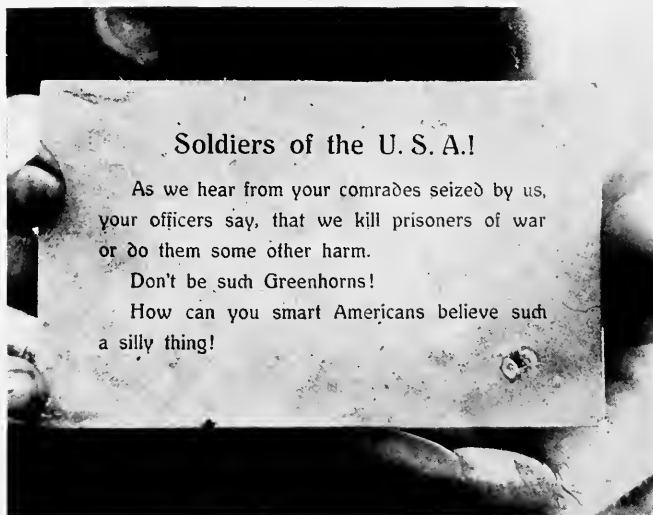

"On August 28, 1918, near St. Gilles, France, Captain Wilkinson carried messages to the regimental P. C. of the 112th Infantry, over an area then being subjected to fire from low-flying bombardment-planes; and by rare presence of mind in taking cover between successive bursts of bombs, was able to deliver important messages in safety."

AFTER THE ARMISTICE

HE war was over, and immediately thoughts began to turn toward what came to be the burning question: "When do we go home?" Though the prospects for fighting further were practically gone, there was no let-up in the work of the Division, and little time was lost in changing the war-time activity of a combat division to the peace-time program of intensive training, as the Army of Occupation might demand the service of the Division. Orders from higher headquarters indicated that the same concentrated effort which had been demanded from the troops in the field would be demanded in the task of learning the lessons of the war by carrying out a systematic schedule of general and special training, during the period of waiting for transportation home. November 14, 1918, a Divisional School of Arms was established at Laneuveville under the direction of Colonel Isaac Newell. Instructors and students were hurriedly assembled, a system of administration established, and courses in gas defense, machine guns, grenades, signaling, Stokes mortar, one pounder, and automatic rifle began on schedule time, conducted by instructors, trained in army service schools, both in the United States and A. E. F. The enrollment was in the neighborhood of 900 men. All courses, excepting the course in Gas Defense, were for a period of one week. The Gas Defense course was a three day course.

Divisional Headquarters, 88th Division, at Lagney, near Toul, France, from November 8, 1918, to November 30, 1918

At this time, orders were received directing organizations to divest themselves of all equipment and stores not needed in a forward movement. Everything pointed toward the probability of the Division moving forward to occupy enemy territory. Hopes for an early return to the United States dwindled. This order was followed on November 19th by an order for the hasty salvaging of all property within the area of the Division. The work was divided amongst the troops, all units being assigned to certain sub-sectors. Practically the entire Division worked for a period of three days, collecting salvage at La Cunje, Minorville, Boucq, Manoncourt and Cornieville. Thus began immediately the tremendous task of removing from the battle area the traces of over four years of bitter warfare.

It was during the stay in this area that a division insignia was adopted and officially recognized. The design adopted was two solid figures "8," crossed at right angles, giving the appearance of a Maltese cross, made with loops, but more generally assumed to be a four-leaved clover. The insignia was to be worn on the left sleeve, adjoining and below the shoulder seam. The extreme height of the design was to be $2\frac{1}{4}$ inches, and the extreme width of loops seven-eighths of an inch. The colors were to be blue, red and black, for infantry and machine gun units, artillery, and division and special units, respectively. Several designs had been considered. Sergeant Sylvan L. Lyksett Draftsman in the office of G-2 was the designer of the final 88th Division insignia, based on the clover-leaf idea which was originated by Corporal Robert J. Fitzgerald, 338th Machine Gun Battalion.

In addition to the special training at the Divisional School of Arms, a schedule of general training began almost immediately after the armistice. It consisted of regular company and battalion drill, and terrain exercises executed by the Brigades and the Division. The training period was worked out on a basis of a four weeks' program, and began on November 26th, when the first terrain exercise was carried out by the 176th Infantry Brigade. This brigade exercise was closely followed on November 27th by the first division terrain exercise.

Meanwhile, November 15th, the 313th Engineer Regiment was ordered to proceed under its own transportation to Pont-a-Mousson, reporting upon arrival to the Chief Engineer, Second Army, for reconstruction work. Moving with the utmost dispatch, this regiment proceeded to Arnaville, north of Pont-a-Mousson. Here, operating in the area included in the triangle formed by Metz-Conflans-Pont-a-Mousson, the 313th Engineer Regiment carried out successfully the work of reconstruction for a period of six weeks. In twenty-six hours after the arrival at Arnaville, they repaired, and in places rebuilt, the Metz-Pont-a-Mousson line, so that French trains could be operated north to Metz. This line was then double-tracked, after which the Arnaville-Conflans railway was built and double-tracked. The regiment, during this period, built and rebuilt railroads, repaired roads, destroyed mines, installed telephone lines, and operated electric light plants in this area. The regiment did not return to the Division until January, 1919.

On the morning of November 27th, while the first Division Terrain Exercise was being worked out, came orders from the Second Army, directing the 88th Division, less artillery and engineers, to move by marching to the Gondrecourt Training Area. On the day before, the Division had been relieved from further duty with the VI Army Corps and had again been put into Second Army Reserve, in which it had been since November 13, 1918. There it remained until December 5th, when it was assigned to the IX Army Corps.

Previous to receipt of the move order, the Division had been directed by the Second Army to have its entire area and an additional area to the westward thoroughly policed by Saturday, November the 30th. This policing had been ordered done by the Division Commander for Friday the 29th, but as the Division was to commence its move to the Gondrecourt Area that date, it was found necessary to celebrate Thanksgiving Day in preparing for the move, all troops being engaged in cleaning up the area, and the staff devoting the entire day writing the field order and making the necessary administrative arrangements.

On the 29th of November, the long march commenced. It was necessary to stage the troops during the move, and the Commercy and Void areas were assigned the Division for that purpose. It was the desire of the Army Commander that the movement be utilized for training, and inspectors from the Army accompanied the troops, observing the march discipline, and other elements so vital to military operations.

Division Headquarters closed at Lagney at 16 hours, 29th of November and opened the same date and hour at Gondrecourt in the department of the Meuse; and the first day of December found the entire division, less artillery and engineers, in the new area, the area which was known as the First Training Area, for it had been the training ground of the First American Division.

GONDRECOURT

The history now reaches a trying period in the life of the 88th Division. The Department of the Meuse was admitted by the inhabitants to be one of the poorest and least desirable in the country; poor, stony soil, dirty, shambling villages, and weather of the worst variety. The rain was almost constant, not in heavy downfalls, but in persistent, misty drizzles, and mud was everywhere.

Without pausing first to make itself comfortable, and in spite of rain, mud and cold, the Division almost immediately after its arrival resumed the activities of the first training period since the armistice. The completion of the move found the

Officers of 313th Engineers at their Headquarters in Arnayville, M. et M., France November 25, 1918

Division ready to launch into the activities of the second week of the four week schedule. On December 4th, the 176th Brigade carried out the third brigade terrain exercise. On the next day, the fourth brigade terrain exercise was worked out by the 175th Brigade, and on the 6th of December, the second division terrain exercise became a matter of history. At this time, Lieutenant-Colonel Torrey B. Maghee, General Staff, returned as G-3 to the Division from the Staff College at Langres, and took charge of the training.

During the third week, eight regimental maneuvers were held, two by each infantry regiment, and were carried out on December 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th. The fourth week called for three division maneuvers, which were carried out on December 16th, 17th and 19th. During the entire period, regular company and battalion training continued, and the 21st of December found the 88th Division leading the A. E. F., being the first Division to complete this first period of training after the Armistice. Throughout this period, it rained continuously, sometimes in heavy showers, sometimes in a steady drizzle, and men marched many kilometers daily in mud of a most tenacious kind, returning to their billets at night wet to the skin, and without adequate means of drying their one change of clothing.

The Division School of Arms had been discontinued at Laneuveville upon the movement of the Division from the Lagney Area. On December 5th, the School opened at St. Joire (Meuse), under the direction of Colonel Milton A. Elliott, Jr. On December 18th, upon the transfer of Colonel Elliott to G. H. Q., Lieutenant-Colonel Napoleon W. Riley, of the 352d Infantry, was placed in charge of the school. By Dec. 18th, in the neighborhood of 1,000 officers and men were attending the various schools at St. Joire each week.

Motorcycle Couriers at Division Headquarters, Lagney, near Toul, France, November 22, 1918

In the Gondrecourt Area, for the first time in France, the Division received adequate transportation. In the latter part of December, the Division was assigned and received about 150 motor trucks, aggregating a capacity of about 280 tons, and several additional passenger and touring cars. Until December 26th, 1918, the Division had received only 423 horses and 9 mules. On the last week of December, 700 more horses and mules were received, and in the month of January about 3,000 more animals were added.

On the 25th of December, 1918, the 57th Field Artillery Brigade, including the 119th, 120th, 121st and 147th Field Artillery regiments, and the 107th Ammunition Train, was assigned to the Division. It arrived in the Division Area between the 20th and the 25th of December, 1918. This brigade had an excellent fighting record. It had supported in succession, the 32d Division, the 9th French Division, the 53d French Division, in the Haute-Alsace Sector from the 12th of June to the 22d of July, 1918. It supported, in succession, the 32d, 28th, and 77th American Divisions in the Aisne-Marne offensive, from August 1st to August 25th, 1918. It supported, in succession, the 32d Division, the 1st Moroccan Division and the 10th French Army in the Oise-Aisne offensive, from the 28th of August to the 6th of December, 1918. It supported the 79th, 3d, 32d and 89th Divisions in the Meuse-Argonne offensive from September 26th to November 8th, 1918.

Some of the Division Transportation

The 107th Ammunition Train remained with the Division until January 14th, 1919, when it proceeded to Coblenz, Germany, being assigned to the Third Army, for return to the United States with the 32d Division. The remainder of the 57th Field Artillery Brigade remained with the Division until April 8th, when it was transferred to the S. O. S. for return to the United States with the 32d Division, to which it originally belonged, and with which it came to France.

The 163d Field Artillery Brigade, consisting of the 337th, 338th and 339th Field Artillery Regiments, which was a part of the 88th Division at Camp Dodge, and which was in training at artillery training schools in the south of France at the time of the Armistice, was returned to the United States in January, 1919, never having rejoined the 88th Division. Demobilization of its personnel was effected soon after its return to the United States.

The Division, at the end of the first training period, had been in France about four months. From the training area behind the lines, it had been rushed into the line in the Center Sector Haute-Alsace, from there, by rail, to the Second Army Area to act as reserve in the Meuse-Argonne offensive, and since the Armistice it had carried out a strenuous training program, executed long marches, and now for the first time since arrival in France the troops were given a rest during the Christmas period. Christmas and New Year's Day were holidays and during the two weeks from December 22d to January 4th, no work was done after noon daily. Christmas was observed by the Division in true American fashion. In most of the towns in the area where troops were billeted, Christmas trees were erected in the public squares for the troops and the French town people. Contributions were collected from the soldiers and gifts of candy, toys and articles of clothing were given to all the French children in these towns. Company funds were lavishly used for the purpose of supplying to the men Christmas and New Year dinners as nearly like those at home as conditions could afford. Christmas marked a clear dividing line between preceding activities of the Division and those that followed.

On the 5th of January, the second four week schedule of training was begun. Orders had been received directing that all training of a purely military character would be limited to five hours daily, and that the fifth hour could be devoted to athletics. As a result, schedules were arranged so that purely military training ceased at noon, and the afternoon and evening were devoted to athletics, schools and entertainment. The second period of training, in addition to regular company and battalion drill, called for one brigade terrain exercise during the first week, a division terrain exercise the second week, and two regimental maneuvers the third and fourth weeks each. The third four week period of training was a repetition of the second. The fourth period of training commenced March 1st and continued to May 2d, 1919. During this period, training was placed more or less under the direction of the Division Commander, it being specified, however, that certain types of training were to be emphasized. Thus training in musketry became the prime feature in the military education of the Division at this time. During each of the first two weeks of this period, two regimental maneuvers were held, and on March 25th, 1919, the last division terrain exercise was held under the supervision of the IX Corps.

For five months, now, the Division had been carrying out vigorously a schedule of training in spite of the most unfavorable weather and living conditions. Neither rain, cold, mud or snow had been allowed to interfere, and the result was that the fighting efficiency of the Division had been improved to a high degree. Much had been accomplished in the direction of organization of effort along line of unity of leadership and execution. When the Division came into the Gondrecourt area, there were no billets but the old buildings of a more or less nondescript character that are to be found in the ordinary country village in France. There were no drying rooms, no stoves, no lights but the primitive candle, no place for recreation and amusement. But shortly after the first of the year, conditions began to change and ameliorate. After some weeks, the ingenuity and resourcefulness of the American soldier began to evidence itself. Barracks were erected, stoves were obtained and huts were built in each town, operated by the Y. M. C. A., as a kind of community center to which the soldiers could go for warmth, comfort and entertainment. Organizations arranged for drying-rooms, where the men could go to dry their clothes when returning from the maneuver and drill field. Electric lighting plants were installed in many of the towns, life in general became more bearable. Lt. Col. A. F. MacLean, Cavy., who succeeded Lt. Col. Bennett C. Clark as G-1, brought much ingenuity to play in achieving this important transformation.

Along with the general change for the better in the living conditions, came the authorization that one hour daily could be used for organized athletics. Later this was increased to two hours. Immediately Division and Organization Athletic Officers were appointed, and the men soon displayed that love of organized sport so characteristic of the American. Suitable grounds for football fields and baseball fields were not difficult to obtain, and a Division football team was organized under the direction of the Division Athletic Officer, Lt. Col. W. J. O'Loughlin. Beginning the middle of January, every afternoon the football squads worked out on the hill behind Division Headquarters at Gondrecourt. What looked like a championship team soon began to make its appearance. The first inter-division football game in the A. E. F. championship elimination was played against the team of the 5th Division in the field northwest of Houdelaincourt on the 15th of February, 1919. The game resulted in a tie, score 0 to 0. On the 19th of February, the tie was played off at Esch-sur-Alzette, resulting in a victory for the 5th Division by a score of 3 to 0. The Division football team played the IX Corps team near Gondrecourt on the 25th of February, defeating them by the score of 38 to 0. The first week in March, the team made a trip into the Third Army area, playing the 33d Division at Diekirch, Germany, on March 1st, defeating them 13 to 0; and playing the 89th Division at Treves on March 5th, resulting in a victory for the 89th Division by a score of 13 to 9. The 89th Division later became the A. E. F. champions.

The Division basketball team was organized the middle of February and played in the Second Army championship series in March. The Division played two games each with the 28th, 35th and 79th Divisions and VI and IX Army Corps, taking third place in the series. The middle of March, the basketball team took a trip to the Third Army, there playing two picked teams, winning one game and losing the other.

The baseball team was organized in April and has a creditable record, playing eight games, losing only one. The games are as follows: April 22d with Toul Replacement Depot, score 18 to 1. In the first week of May, the team made a trip into the First Army Area, defeating the 6th Division in two games 8 to 1 and 9 to 3; beating the 36th Division 6 to 1 and A. E. F. University at Beaune 5 to 1. On May 5th and 6th, the Division team played the 7th Division team two games, losing the first game 5 to 3 and winning the second, 12 to 1. The last game was played with the Marines at St. Nazaire May 19th, resulting in a victory for the Division team, score 7 to 2.

In February and March, boxing and wrestling tournaments were held in the Division to pick the best boxers and wrestlers of the Division. On the 17th and 18th of March, the Second Army eliminations in boxing and wrestling were held. Five wrestlers of the Division won the right at these contests to represent the Second Army in the A. E. F. championship boxing and wrestling tournament at Paris, in May.

A Division track squad was organized in April. On April 17th, a Division track and field meet was held near Gondrecourt. The 338th Machine Gun Battalion took first place; the 351st Infantry, second place, and the 313th Supply Train, third place. The track meet showed that there was considerable track ability in the Division, but the return to the United States of the Division, in May, prevented the track team from participating in the A. E. F. championship meet.

During the months of February, March and April while championship divisional football, basketball, baseball, track, boxing and wrestling teams were being picked and were competing with teams from other organizations, these same sports were emphasized throughout the units of the Division. Two hours were given to athletics each afternoon of the week (excepting Saturday and Sunday). Pentathlon competitions were held in all the units of both infantry brigades. Boxing and wrestling exhibitions were held frequently in towns through the divisional area. Athletics helped to make the stay at Gondrecourt pass more quickly and more happily.

When it began to be apparent that a considerable period of time would elapse before the return of the A. E. F. could be accomplished, it became necessary to devise a means of turning the time of waiting to the advantage of the men. G. H. Q. was impressed with the need of contributing to the life of the soldier in the A. E. F. something that not only would make him a better soldier, but something as well that could be used by him to advantage after return to civil life. It was in harmony with this policy that soon after the Armistice a general order was issued providing that, the first of the year, post schools would be organized throughout the A. E. F. The 349th Infantry had organized such schools in the regiment about the middle of December, and on January 2d, 1919, post schools were established throughout the units of the Division, under the immediate supervision of the school officer. The first post schools to be organized in the Second Army, the 88th Division Schools, once more demonstrated the ability of the Division to be among the foremost. The initial organization showed 120 instructors and about 1,600 students. Books were secured from Chaumont and Paris, and later from the Second Army at Toul. French public school buildings, Y. M. C. A. huts, barracks and even the ordinary billets were utilized in this new educational project. Courses were conducted in the three "R's," reading, writing and arithmetic, in American and French history, civics and several other advanced and special subjects. In the post schools the illiterates, of whom there were a number in the Division, were given special attention, and throughout the stay at Gondrecourt marked improvement resulted, especially for these men. The greatest interest was evinced and soon the number of schools in operation in the Division area numbered 26, with an enrollment of approximately 3,000 students.

In order to stimulate interest in the post school work, a contest was arranged by gradual elimination between representatives of the units of the Division. The contest was held in Gondrecourt early in May, and consisted of oral and written competition in history, reading, spelling, writing, rapid calculation and composition. This contest marked the close of the post schools, pronounced by educational experts of the Educational Commission to be the best system in the A. E. F.

Opportunity for education was not limited to study of elementary subjects within the Division area. On February 27th, 1919, the Division sent 80 officers and 121 enlisted men to British and French universities to study law, science, letters and medicine for a period of three months; and on March 5th, 1919, 19 officers and 121 enlisted men were sent as students to the A. E. F. University at Beaune, Cote d'Or. About twelve officers and men had previously been sent from the Division to this A. E. F. college to act as instructors. No stone was left unturned to provide the greatest possible opportunity for education, and it was found that further facilities must be supplied for more advanced study within the Division. Orders had been received directing that a vocational center of instruction be established in each Division in the A. E. F. to give officers and men the opportunity to pursue lines of study that would fit them better for civil life. The scope of this project rendered it necessary to provide a place where 2,000 students at least could be taken care of. An educational survey of the Division had been made and it was found that in the neighborhood of 6,000 applicants wanted to take these vocational and advanced academic courses.

It was decided that the Divisional School of Arms located at St. Joire (Meuse) be discontinued in order to make way for the new educational center. The School of Arms had accomplished a great work. During the winter several new courses had been added, including tactical handling of machine guns, field engineering and a course for cooks and mess sergeants. Each week an infantry attack problem using auxiliary arms had been held. The school had developed an excellent spirit, and it was with a feeling of regret that on March 8th, "formal funeral services" over the dead school were held at St. Joire. During its life, 11,111 officers and men had been enrolled in the various branches.

For a period of two weeks after the closing of the School of Arms, engineers and infantrymen were busily employed making preparations for the new school. The town of St. Joire was found to be inadequate for handling such a large body of students and a great deal of work had to be done in a very short time. Barracks for students had to be erected, class-rooms and workshops had to be constructed. In the third week of March, the new plant was ready to commence operations. Lt. Col. Fred B. Ray of the 350th Infantry had been made Commandant of the School and Major Robert T. Layton of the 349th Infantry had been placed in direct charge of the Educational department of the new school. An administrative staff had been assembled, which was adequate for taking care of the matter of office work and supply. Approximately 50 new buildings had been erected, and on the 24th of March, 1919, the Divisional Educational Center opened its doors to 1,661 students. Courses were opened in agriculture, automobile repairing, barbering, carpentry, mechanical drawing, radio, telephone repair, telegraphy, economics, history, French and Spanish. Instructors were drawn from the Division and a teaching staff of experience and exceptional ability had been organized. The enrollment increased gradually with the ability of the school to take care of more students. Soon the number attending grew to 1,750.

Thus began one of the largest attempts in the A. E. F. to furnish instruction and opportunity for improvement to the soldiers. Had the schools been permitted to go on, undoubtedly it would have become of the greatest service, but the early return of the Division prevented realization of plans to the full. In spite of the fact, a keen interest was created in the instructors and student body, and great progress was made during the spectacular but short-lived existence of the educational center. In the meantime, other schools of a minor importance had been established and were in operation continuously throughout the winter and spring. A school for balloon observers had been begun, and a school in sanitation was commenced March 24th at Hevilliers. Of a more strictly military nature was the school for officers in the new Infantry Drill Regulations, which commenced the 24th of February, which recalled to the officers of the Division the officers' schools of Camp Dodge.

In addition to the regular school activities, educational work took the form of lectures on special subjects of a varied nature. Lecturers came to the Division from outside sources, being furnished by the Army Educational Commission. Other lecturers were found within the Division, and were used to the best advantage. About 2,000 men attended lectures weekly. Simultaneously, four Farmers' Clubs were organized and operated successfully, with a total membership of 200. Some conception of the extensive nature of the educational program of the 88th Division may be had from the fact that at one time approximately 5,000 officers and men were engaged in this work in some capacity or other.

One of the most pleasant features of the memorable winter was the series of leave

Nice, on the Riviera, Southern France, where the majority of the men of the 88th Division spent their leaves trips for officers and men of the A. E. F. Leaves were granted according to certain classes, some of those permitting trips to Great Britain, Italy and the Spanish border. The Riviera (Nice, Monte Carlo, Cannes) was an organized leave area and vied with Paris in popularity. Leave trains left at stated periods per week with large numbers of men from the Division, and they were kept in good hotels with real beds and excellent food free of charge.

Decoration of General Weigel with Distinguished Service Medal and Croix de Guerre with Palm by General Pershing at Division Review, near Gondrecourt, Meuse, France, April 19, 1919

With so many men absent at school or on leave, companies were often reduced to only one officer and half strength in men, but the plan went far to remove the ennui of waiting, though it did not entirely remove the existence of the demand "When do we go home?" When the schedule of combat divisions to go home by July 1st was finally announced, the 38th Division was not even mentioned in the list.

ENTERTAINMENT

During the stay of the Division at Gondrecourt, under the direction of the Division Entertainment Officer, an effort was made to furnish entertainment to every man in the Division every night. Y. M. C. A. productions, local talent shows or moving pictures were presented in every town in the divisional area almost every night. During these months the several units of the Division organized minstrel and vaudeville shows from talent within the organizations. The 175th Brigade, the 313th Engineers, the 351st Infantry, with two shows, the 352d Infantry, the 313th Sanitary Train, all produced shows. They toured the Division and Second Army area. The first show of the 351st Infantry and the 313th Engineers show toured the Third Army area in Germany. The 175th Brigade show played in the Second Army area and in the S. O. S. and Paris, and met with success everywhere.

In April, Miss Margaret Wilson visited the Division and sang for the officers and men throughout the towns of the area and met with an enthusiastic reception everywhere.

The last and biggest show produced within the Division was the Division Show, a Song and Dance Revue, entitled "Who Can Tell." It had for its purpose not only to entertain but to present a genuine "doughboy show," a show that would fairly represent what the doughboys could do. "Who Can Tell" was staged under the direction of Dinnie MacDonald. Captain Arthur B. Kachel, the Division Entertainment Officer, was general manager. The music of the show was composed by 2d Lt. Edward J. Collins. The book and lyrics were written by Elbert Moore, Dinnie MacDonald, 1st Lt. Wm. D. Darrow and Musician H. L. Gear. The Jewish Welfare Board contributed 75,000 francs for the costumes which were made by Landolff, Paris. The Salvation Army, the Y. M. C. A. and the Knights of Columbus assisted in furnishing property. The men of the Division contributed 15,000 francs for the general expenses of the show.

After six weeks' preparation, the show was produced. During this time, the music was composed and orchestrated; lyrics were written; an orchestra of 35 men was selected and trained. A caste and chorus of 125 men were picked and drilled. Doughboy amateurs were trained until they performed like professional actors and actresses. A theatre consisting of two aviation hangars had to be constructed to house the show. A stage had to be built and scenery painted.

On April 21st, 1919, the Division show was presented in the double hangar theatre at Gondrecourt. Musician Harold Gilles as Head Waiter, detective and Hiram Searum was the chief comedian of the show. His Scarnumville act was a distinct success. He was ably assisted by Musician Charles Tolstel, Sergeant Milton Strauss and Musician Frank E. Soil. Corporal Carl McKee, as prima donna, sang and danced his way to success. He sang "Love Divine" and the "Clover Leaf Song." Dinnie MacDonald, Musician H. L. Gear, Musician Charles Tolstel, Private Kenneth Foley, Sergeant Rollo S. Thorpe, Sergeant G. Harrington, Corporal H. A. Mench and Private Walter Peterson sang other song hits of the show. Private W. R. Smith as Mrs. Gondrecourt played with distinction an important and difficult role. The chorus of West Pointers, Scotch Highlanders, French and Italian soldiers, of graceful show girls and dancing ponies was the distinctive feature of the show. There were graceful dancers and clever comedy. The gypsy scene was picturesque and the Persian scene was strikingly beautiful and spectacular, and the captivating music of Lt. Collins enshrined the American doughboy in the hearts of the French and American audiences.

"Who Can Tell" was presented eleven successive nights at Gondrecourt. Twenty-five Hundred men of the Division were brought in by trucks each night to see the performance, until all the men of the Division and many French people and many troops of nearby units had seen it. From Gondrecourt, the Division show went to Coblenz, where it showed two nights. From Coblenz, the show went to Paris. In Paris the show was presented for the first time in a real theatre—the Champs Elysees Theatre. For six nights, commencing May 12th, the show played to a packed house. After the first night, several thousand persons were turned away nightly. President Wilson and party attended the last performance of the show. In its edition of May 14th, the dramatic critic of the Chicago Tribune in a letter addressed to the editor made the following comment:

"There have only been two things of real importance in Paris since you went away—the threat of the Germans to leave the Peace Conference, and the opening Monday night at the Champs Elysees Theatre of the 88th Division Show, 'Who Can Tell.' Some show, Boy, some show! It's the best amateur show I have ever seen on either side of the water. There are a lot of Broadway shows getting three dollars that ought to be sent to warehouse to let this one in for a run."

"It isn't a show—it's a production. In costumes, it makes the 'Garden of Allah' look like a rookie. I think Major General William Weigel must have assigned the whole regiment to the caste, for when they came out over the footlights on those run-around boards in the orchestra, they filled the duckboards and the whole stage."

"And a pony ballet! With the cutest little fat legs you ever saw. They got a hand every time they came on. You would never know they were doughboys until they began to sing. 'Who Can Tell' is a kind of musical burlesque with enough of a plot to keep the show in military channels for three hours."

Other events of the winter and spring that occupied the minds of officers and men, and furnished relief from the monotony of months in a district devoid of diversion, were the Division Horse Show, the Motor Show, and the Enlisted Men's Tournament.

The Horse Show was held on a field near Gondrecourt on February 26, 1919. Regimental and Brigade Horse Shows had been held previously to choose contestants for the Division event. An elaborate program of ring, track and oval events had been prepared. First place was won by the 352d Infantry, and second place by the 351st Infantry. Later, winners in this show were sent to compete in the IX Corps Show at Leronville, in which the 88th Division won Second Place.

The Motor Transport Show was held near Demange-Aux-Eaux on the 28th and 29th of March, 1919. Both the Horse Show and the Motor Transport Show were spectacular events, furnishing excellent entertainment for the officers and men of the Division, and they assisted in putting the transportation of the Division in excellent condition.

The last big event of the Gondrecourt period occurred on the 26th of April, 1919, when the enlisted men of the Division gave a big Military Tournament and Field Meet, near Gondrecourt. A program was arranged to pick the best of the Division in all military, athletic and special events, and after the best Kitchen Police, the best military burlesque show, the best Jazz Band, the best billet, the best amusement hut, and the best in scores of other events had been picked, it was discovered that the 351st Infantry had won first place, the 349th Infantry second place, and the 350th Infantry third place. After the program had been completed, General Weigel was given a "Clover Leaf Medal" and a citation by the enlisted men of the 88th Division, as a recognition by the men of the Division of his interest in them and his untiring efforts in their behalf.

Having mentioned the "Clover Leaf Medal," it becomes fitting in this place to describe its origin. It had been decided that some suitable recognition of excellence in the various contests held by the Division be given. Major E. F. Wood made a rough sketch and with the aid of A. Bazor, a famous sculptor of Paris, the "Clover Leaf Medal," in gold, silver and bronze, resulted. Winners of First Place were to be given the Gold Medal, winners of Second Place the silver, and winners of Third Place the bronze medals. Medals were awarded to winners in the ring events of the Horse Show, in all the events of the Motor Show, and the Enlisted Men's Show; to the winners in the Post School competitions, and to all officers and men in the Division proper given Division citations for bravery. On May 2d, it was decided that a bronze "Clover Leaf Medal" be given to every soldier having been a member of the 88th Division while the Division served in the A. E. F. In the case of men who had died, a posthumous medal was to be sent to his representative.

One of the successful accomplishments of the Division after the Armistice was the reappearance of the "Camp Dodger," known as the "Overseas Edition." The first issue of this paper was published the last week in January, 1919. News was collected from the units of the Division by courier, by courier it went from Gondrecourt to Bar-le-Duc, where in a small French press the paper was printed, under the editorship of Lt. L. R. Fairall. The paper was printed on book paper, and consisted of four pages, each of four columns. Later the paper grew in size and excellence. It moved to Paris in order to take advantage of better facilities and soon became an eight-page standard size newspaper, with a two-page pictorial supplement, featuring pictures of activities of the Division. It was published weekly and distributed throughout the Division area by truck. It circulated throughout the A. E. F. area, and thousands of copies went across the water each week to keep the folks at home informed of the doings of the Clover-Leaf Division. It was a "Doughboy" proposition all the way through, and proved to be a most successful undertaking.

General Pershing, Secretary Baker and General Weigel, after the review

Early in March General Headquarters ordered several officers from each Division to report in Paris for a meeting to discuss plans for the welfare of the men of the A. E. F. Lt.-Col. Bennett C. Clark, Asst. Chief of Staff G-1 and Major Eric Fisher Wood, Asst. Chief of Staff G-2 were selected to represent the 88th Division.

These two officers, together with Lt.-Col. Theodore Roosevelt, were the originators of the idea of forming the American Legion. They thought that there would never again be as good a chance as at that time, as each Division was well represented, therefore the American Legion was given birth with Lt.-Col. Roosevelt as temporary Chairman and Major Wood as temporary Secretary. Later Col. Roosevelt was ordered home and Lt.-Col. Clark was appointed Chairman. The American Legion is now growing into an enormous institution. Major Wood was made Secretary at the meeting in St. Louis later in the year, and is now devoting his entire time to organizing posts all over the United States. The first annual convention will be held in Minneapolis, Minnesota, on November 11, 1919. Thus this institution, which will surely be one of the greatest things in the United States, was really founded by 88th Division Officers.

After a winter and spring filled with hard work, more or less discomfort, and considerable play, in April, events began to promise an early movement of the Division homeward. On April 19, 1919, the culmination of the life of the 88th as a combat division came with the review of the Division on that date by General John J. Pershing, Commander-in-Chief of the A. E. F., with Secretary of War Baker and Major General Andre Brewster. Major-General Weigel was decorated this date by General Pershing with the Distinguished Service Medal, also the Croix de Guerre with palm. Lt.-Col. Charles F. Wyman was also decorated this date with Croix de Guerre with silver star. The colors of the various units of the Division were decorated with battle streamers. After months of overcast skies and pouring rain, the 88th passed into history as a combat unit on the horse show ground south of Gondrecourt, with beautiful sunshine giving promise of better times to come. After the review, the assembled officers and men of the Division were addressed by General Pershing and Secretary Baker.

On April 11th, 1919, the Division was directed to make first preparations for return to the United States; training was ordered discontinued and all available personnel to be used for placing the First Training Area as nearly as possible in its original condition, preparatory to its being taken over by the French. On April 15th, the Divisional Educational Center was closed; on April 17th, the Post Schools were discontinued. The balloon school had been closed on the 19th and on the 26th of the month the school in sanitation closed.

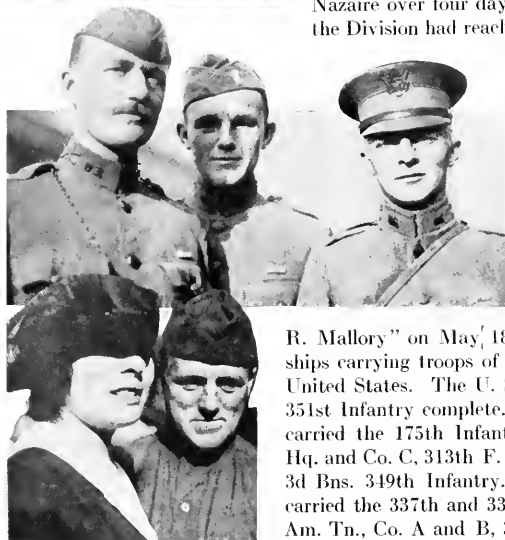

On April 15th, the 88th Division (with the IX Army Corps) was transferred to the First American Army. Five days later, the Division (with the IX Army Corps) was placed under direct control of General Headquarters, American Expeditionary Forces; and on April 26th, 1919, the Division was transferred to the control of the Service of Supply for early return to the United States.

HOMeward BOUND

On the 7th of May, 1919, under orders from the Advance Section, S. O. S., the Division (less 313th Engineers) started movement to the La Suze area near Le Mans. The 313th Engineers remained temporarily at Gondrecourt to complete the cleaning up of the area. Movement to the La Suze area was completed on May 13th. Division Headquarters closed at Gondrecourt at 18:00 hours, May 8th and opened at La Suze (Sarthe) the same date and hour.

Arrival of the 351st Infantry in Des Moines. Colonel Crosby, Commanding Officer, in Center

The stay in the Le Mans Area was brief. Before the last units had arrived in the area, the Division had received orders to move to St. Nazaire for embarkation to the United States. The first units entrained for St. Nazaire on the 15th of May and the movement was hurried along so that the last units of the Division had cleared the Le Mans area by May 18th and had reached St. Nazaire on May 19th. The 313th Engineers, proceeding direct from the Gondrecourt area, reached St. Nazaire May 20th. Division Headquarters closed at La Suze 12 hours May 17th and opened at St. Nazaire May 18th.

No units of the Division stayed in St. Nazaire over four days. Before the last units of the Division had reached there, the first units to arrive there were already on the water. Units of the 349th Infantry were the first to sail for America. Regtl. Hq., 1st Bn. Hq., Hq. Co., Supply Co., M. G. Co. and Cos. A, B and C of that regiment sailed for the United States on the U.S.S. "Henry R. Mallory" on May 18th. On May 19th, three ships carrying troops of the Division sailed for the United States. The U. S. S. "Aeolus" carried the 351st Infantry complete. The U. S. S. "Rijndam" carried the 175th Infantry Brigade Headquarters, Hq. and Co. C, 313th F. S. Bn. and Co. D., 2d and 3d Bns. 349th Infantry. The U. S. S. "Pastores" carried the 337th and 339th M. G. Bns., the 313th Am. Tn., Co. A and B, 313th F. S. Bn. and 301st

Sales Commissary Unit. On May 20th, the U. S. S. "Mercury" sailed for America with the 176th Brig. Hq. and the whole of the 351st Infantry. On May 21st, three more ships carrying troops of the Division sailed for the United States. On the "Canonius" were the 1st Bn. and M. G. Co., 352d Infantry and the 313th Supply Train. On the U. S. S. "Pocahontas" were Division Headquarters, Headquarters Troop, 313th Tn. Hq., 313th M. O. R. S. and the 352d Infantry (less 1st Bn. and M. G. Co.). On the U. S. S. "Koenigen der Nederlanden" were the 338th M. G. Bn., 88th and 275th M. P. Co.'s and 313th Sn. Tn. The last units of the Division to leave France was the 313th Engineers. It sailed for America on May 24th on the U. S. S. "Madawaska."

The 88th Division (less engineers and artillery) was together as a unit under the control of the Division Commander for the last time May 15, 1919, in the La Saze Area. On arrival in the United States, in accordance with the policy of the War Department, the units were not kept intact, but the officers and men of the various units were sent to the camps nearest their respective homes for demobilization. Over ten thousand officers and men of the Division were demobilized at Camp Dodge, nearly three thousand officers and men were demobilized at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis and Camp Funston, respectively. About one thousand five hundred went to Camp Grant. The remainder of the officers and men of the Division were demobilized at camps scattered all over the United States.

On arrival at Des Moines, Iowa, each Troop train was met by a reception committee composed of leading business men. The troops were formed in column of squads and were paraded from the railroad yards to Walnut Street down to Eighth Street, over to Locust, down to Fifth, and then north to Grand Avenue, where they found a big meal provided for them by the women of the various welfare societies of Des Moines. Throngs of people crowded the streets and, as the men marched, they were given a welcome such as has never been heard of before in the Middle West. The men found it very difficult to keep their heads and eyes straight to the front. It was the day that the men have been waiting for ever since the Germans signed the Armistice—they were back again with their own people in God's Country, and the reception accorded them will never be forgotten.

Immediately after the parade the men were sent to Camp Dodge and pushed through the demobilization machine and within forty-eight hours after arrival they appeared again in the city of Des Moines with the red chevron sewed on their left sleeve, indicating that they were again civilians. The railroad stations were swamped selling tickets to Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska and all parts of Iowa to the former Clover Leaf men and they were once more on the way to their own homes where the biggest reception of all awaited them.

A word in conclusion. The 88th Division, although not permitted to come to France until the summer of 1918, trained and sent forty thousand men to France with other units to represent it gloriously there. Immediately on arrival in France, it was rushed into the line in a quiet sector. Without transportation, without equipment, the Division rendered a splendid account of itself in the Haute-Alsace sector. By its activity there it prevented the Germans from withdrawing troops on the south to be sent against our forces in the Meuse-Argonne offensive. By its activity in Haute Alsace, and by its presence later as IV American Army Corps and Second American Army Reserve, it permitted other American Divisions to be used directly with the First American Army in the Argonne Forest and along the Meuse.

Two Years of American Accomplishment Since War Was Declared*

THE MEN WHO FOUGHT

THERE have been some estimates published of the number of Americans who fought in battle in France, and guesses have varied by very large numbers. We have an estimate now prepared in France which gives us, perhaps, as near as can be determined the number of United States troops that took part in actual fighting.

"Division troops, including replacements, 1,100,000; corps and army troops, 240,000; service of supply, 50,000; total United States troops taking part in action against the enemy, 1,390,000."

CRIPPLED AND BLINDED

Artificial limbs needed by disabled men who were in military service during the war are being provided by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, in accordance with the provisions of the War Risk Insurance act. There have been more than 500 artificial arms and legs furnished to disabled men to date by the bureau. The total number of amputations in the American forces was less than 4,000.

There were no cases in which men lost both of their arms and both legs. Surgeon General Ireland of the Medical Corps of the Army and Colonel Charles E. Banks, Chief Medical Officer of War Risk Insurance, were cited by the bureau as authority for this statement.

There were but 125 cases of total blindness as the result of the war, and not all these cases have yet been declared as permanent by the medical officers in charge, according to reports to the bureau.

The War Department, on March 25th, announced that reports on prisoners from all sources showed a total loss by the American Army of 4,765 military prisoners and 281 civilians. Of the military prisoners, 4,376 have been reported officially as released and 233 died in German prison camps. Only one American officer of as high rank as Lieutenant Colonel was captured during the war. Four Majors, 27 Captains, and 363 Lieutenants were taken prisoner.

CASUALTIES BY DIVISIONS

Revised figures made public by the Chief of Staff April 6th showed that the total battle casualties—that is, men killed in action, wounded, missing in action and prisoners—for the American Expeditionary Forces was 210,197.

"I have just received a chart," said General March, "from General Pershing's headquarters giving the total figures by divisions of the killed in action, wounded, missing in action, and prisoners, according to the division reports received at his headquarters. Possibly these figures will have to be modified in some slight way, but it is as nearly accurate as he could get. The total battle casualties, as we will call them, follow:
